Through the generosity of the Archdeacon of St. Albans the corporation of St. Albans are placed in possession of a volume of considerable public interest, seeing that it now returns to their keeping after the lapse of nearly two centuries. It is a neatly-written copy of the "Constitutions" of Charles II., elegantly bound in morocco, and has been found to be a presentation copy of those Constitutions given by an order of the Corporation, dated August 12, 1734, to Charles, third Duke of Marlborough, who was at that time high steward of the borough.
