POWER FROM THE ROOTING HOG.

Since publishing the article in our May 8th issue, "Pig Raising Made Easy," we have had numerous enquiries for the address of "Another of the Crowd." The object is probably to find out more about the pig feeding apparatus he describes. For the benefit of those interested we may say we have seen a model of the device which was invented by the writer of the article, Mr. J. C. Sileffert of Winnipegosis and it is called the adjustable stock power grinder. The mechanism is simple, but is protected by patent in Canada and the States. It will be on exhibition at Winnipeg in July, but for a time at least there will be none for sale until arrangements are made with a manufacturer to turn them out. Mr. Sileffert is keeping up Manitoba's reputation as the home of inventors, which received such prominence when the late Mr. Cornev of Emerson invented the first cash register, the manufacture of which article has grown to enormous proportions. Mr. Sileffert has another device being patented, which he attaches to an ordinary mowing machine and improvises a perfect potato planting machine. Making an economical use of the propensity of the hog to root certainly required a vivid imagination.
