docks or pastures where they cannot hurt themselves. Colts love company and where there are a number of colts on the farm, they should be in the same stall, paddock or pasture while the mares are in the field. Good sense and judgment must be used in allowing the youngster to suckle at noon and evening. It is very necessary to keep the colt free from accident. Wire cuts, nail pricks and bruises produce severe losses on many farms where colts are raised. To just the extent that a man keeps his colts free from accident, he increases his profits. Old sagging fences must be straightened up; corner posts must be set; broken boards with nails in them must be gathered up. Every precaution possible must be taken to guard against injury because it means the saving of money.

Flies, too, must be guarded against by having the barn clean and by having manure piles and all breeding ground for flies cleaned up. Shelter from the hot sun in summer is another factor that increases the growth and thrift of the colt and increases the profit to the owner. It pays to handle the colts well the first summer. They should be broken to halter. Their feet should be picked up and whenever they need it, trimmed. If they are handled the first summer, much of the work of breaking later will not be necessary. Good care and management the first summer will cause the colt to become a bigger and better horse and a more profitable farm product.—H. E. McCartney, Perdue Agricultural Experimental Station.
