(Cassell's Magazine.) People who have to stand for long periods during the day, or who walk long distances, often suffer conwalk long distances, often suffer considerably from swelling of the feet. They would probably derive some benefit by using a powder which has been introduced into the German army for sifting into the stocking of the foot soldiers. It consists of three parts of salicylic acid, ten parts of starch, and eighty-seven parts of pulvarized seapstone. This powder keeps the feet dry, prevents chafing, and heals any sore spots.
