The assassin rehearses his history as heretoassassin renearses his natory as hereto-fore given by himself and continues:— Soon after Robertson's appointment the republican party began to heat up. This was about the middle of May; by the 1st July it was whiteheat; and if this spirit had not been killed by the president's removal the nation would soon have been in the flame of civil war. To prevent a repetition of the late war and its desola-tion, the removal of the president was necessary. By his removal the republican party was cemented and the nation to-day is happy and prosperous. And to-day I suffer in bonds because I had the inspiration and nerve to remove the president that the nation might live.

When I saw Garfield under Blaine's vindictive spirit, and that he was proving traitor to the men that made grieved me to the heart and I prayed over it. If Garfield was out of the I thought one night in my bed every prayed over the feasibility of the president's removal. The more I prayed about it and the more I looked at political situation, the more I saw the necessity for his removal. Finally after two weeks of earnest prayer I decided the Deity had called me do it, and I commenced preparation for it. This was about the 1st of June. I shot him on July 2nd. Not being a marksman he lingered till September 19th, when he passed quietly and gently away, the Lord thereby confirming my inspiration. There was a special providence dying in New Jersey. I undertake to say the Deity allowed him to die there fested, it was for want of religion. He say the Deity allowed him to die there seems to think that men cannot differ in their views regarding the elegibility of a legal liability for simply executing his candidate for trusteeship without de-monstrating their religion to be worth-law so that their verdict cannot be legalless. That denominational feeling was created for party purposes we do not deny, but we do most emphatically deny that it originated with any member in good standing in either the Presbyterian or Methodist Churches. The animus of "Snodgross" against all true religion displays itself very glaringly in his fling at our Union Prayer meetings. animus of Shougards against an even president might his fling at our Union Prayer meetings, and his vile and false attempt to drag into this party strife the parties who his neck.
