The sawmill was in running order last eek, for the first time for 1888, cutting sadings. Should it continue running, we understand a deputation of the guid-rives of the neighborhood intend to interview the genial manager. Mr Neibergell, with the object of getting him to have the whistle blown at six in the morning, at noon and at supper time. The morning call would save them from waking up the head of the house to light the fire, and the noon and supper whistle would save a great deal of shouting across lots. If their prayer is answered, they may occasionally be more cross, but they certainly will never be more house. Toot, toot! Off she goes.

A braw was laddie of the many waifs that are annually gathered by Miss Rye and others in the motherland for a home in Canada, was shipped from one of the the Homes on Saturday, to a farmer in Kintail, by the G T. R., and transfered at Goderich, in care of the jovial driver of the bus, who lifted him with deep tenderness into the stalwart arms of J. Rose, of Kincardine stage, for his destination, with a fatherly advice to take care of him. At Dunlop the little fellow attracted general attention in his neat dress, with kness breeches and red stockings, and was called out of the stage for a treat of candy. With a stage for a treat of candy. With a pleasant look he nimbly obeyed with the pleasant fook he nimbly obeyed with the quickness of any urchin of nine years old, by hopping out and exchanging smiles with many of the crowd of big girls and little ones, who all said, "what a dear little fellow." He may some day return in search of some of the group that may be left single.

It Looks Bab.—Most of our merchants get their bill heads, envelopes, letter and note paper nestly printed, and we must say it looks like business; but we notice there are some who apparently use any scrap of paper they can lay their hands on to make out an account or to do their corresponding on, and it looks like a one-horse affair—in fact, you would not know that it was from a business man until you rubbed your specs and tried to decipher the "writing." Call at The Signal office and see our samples and get our prices.
