Uncle Walt THE POET PHILOSOPHER.

Aunt Sarah is a suffrage dame, and she has more than local fame. She walks much like a grenadier, and wears her bonnet on her ear. She paws around like everything, and makes the weary THE TWO AUNTS welkin ring. When she comes near, I give a whoop on the nerves; I can't appreciate her curves. She only has one thought, one dream; for her there's but one vital theme, one subject that will hit the spot—and that's her suffrage tommyrot. She may be great and good and wise, but when it comes to making pies or mixing up a Charlotte Russe, my good Aunt Sarah is a goose. Aunt Jenny stays at home and makes the finest pies, the smoothest cakes! She says she never understood the ranting, shrieking sisterhood. She has a pleasant, gentle face; she makes her home a lovely place. And when she looks into our eyes, and sees the love that in them lies, she doesn't hanker for those rights for which the dames sit up at nights. "While all the folks at home love me, I've all the rights I'll want," says she.

Should be Stopped.

There is nuisance in this city which is known as the Saturday night express nuisance. It is especially aggravating to the people of the higher levels, notably on LeMarchant Road, Cabot Street, Monroe Street, Batters Hill and many other sections. These drivers—especially when out late at their work—go sometimes at a high rate of speed, and on some of the thoroughfares which are dark, people, especially old people, must dodge these vehicles quickly to avoid being run over. Nor is the nuisance confined to the higher streets; it is often noticed in the lower sections, especally on New Gower Street and sometimes in evidence on Water Street. Saturday night gave an evidence of this when near the railway station an express dashed along at 9.30 and ran completely over Mr. Thomas McCarthy's hand cart containing groceries made up during the night for people of the South Side, and West End, such articles as butter, flour, etc., were thrown in the mud and churned up and rendered useless with the traffic. It took Mr. McCarthy till midnight to duplicate the orders for the people who had ordered the goods thus destroyed. To make the matter worse the unsympathetic driver of the van never stopped to enquire as to the damage done.
