Outline of a New Treaty Prepared at Washington.

And Said to Have the Approval of Premier Salisbury. New York, Nov. 20.-The World this norning, under a Washington date, prints what purports to be an outline of a new treaty of arbitration, already drawn up by the McKinley administration, and accepted by Premier Salisbury, as follows: 'Compared with the treaty negotiated by Secretary Olney, the new one will be far less binding. The points are brief. First of all, the provision in the late treaty providing that when diplomacy failed to adjust differences, they should be referred to arbitrators, is cut out. No permanent tribunal is to be establishe "According to the new treaty, whenever a difference arises between the two governments which diplomacy fails to adjust, then the Senate and the British government will first consider whether the dispute is one which shall be referred to arbitration or not. If they agree that it is, a suitable arrangement is made binding the two countries to an agreed-upon course;

then the appointment of arbitrators But Peter Wakeman, Aged 118, Expects will be carried out. "Practically, the actual results of the treaty as now contemplated mean that there shall be arbitration when both governments are willing to arbitrate, and not otherwise.

"President McKinley is not disposed to antagonize the Senate, and his long experience in Congress makes him prudent. He will not attempt the impossible, as Cleveland did. He is, there-fore, preparing the kind of arbitration treaty, not that he wants, but that the Senate wants, and will surely ratify. "Sir Julian Pauncefote now has fuil authority to perfect the details of the complete treaty based on the skeleton previously submitted to his government. It will not be necessary to send the complete treaty to London again for approval."
