This stroke of masterly diplomacy on the part of Russia is regarded here with ill-concealed annoyance. It is felt, in fact, that Russia has scored a diplomatic victory, for while professing the doctrine of absolute unanimity among the powers, she places herself in a position of predominance in the eyes of the Balkan Slav population by ascribing the initiative in the reform movement to the Czar, and such significant declarations as the following: "The Balkan States, which owe their independent existence to Russia, can rest assured that their welfare and material and moral interests of Christian populations will be Russia with unceasing solicitude, and they can depend upon the considerate and powerful protec-MISS BRADEN, OF THE GRAHAM
