DANCING IN DISGUISE.

As much of a spectacular affair as a dance, the ball in the A.O.U.W. hall last Friday proved pleasant not to the many participants alone, but to the large number of persons who crowded the galleries and watched the funny figures float about to the dreamy and excellent music of the Wolff orchestra. There were over one hundred couples on the floor, and sufficient is it to say that hardly two costumes were alike. The Northwest Indian and his fair one, with bow and arrow, the gentleman of color in many varied styles, the rooster in leg-horn plumes, the little boot-black, the Chinese girl,
