A FEW REASONS

Reasons are always effective with thoughtful readers, and such are the Canadian public. Here are a few in support of the use of Hallamore's Expectorant: It is as safe and certain for the weakest child as for the strongest adult. Its action is constitutional as well as local—a very desirable feature. It acts by promoting the expulsion of phiegm, which, if permitted to remain, is apt to give rise to catarrh. It maintains the same influence always without any increase in dose, and has a without any increase in dose, and has a thirty-five years' record to sustain it
