

THE Editor regrets that, in the letter from the American General, printed at the close of the Account from Pennsylvania, a few lines were suffered to remain, which convey a censure on some former American missionaries. It may not have been perfectly easy for a person in a very different walk of life to feel exactly the difficulties of their situation. Whoever duly weighs the state of the Indians, may account for their want of success without thinking them much to blame. At any rate the Editor is disposed to call it an oversight, that in a work intended to show the successful diligence of one set of men, there should have slipped in a needless censure of another.