A VICTORIA, B. C. contemporary says: Rev. Dr. Campbell preached and dispensed the Sacrament of the Supper, Sabbath, at the Presbyterian missions in Sooke and Metchoin, to good congregations. This was the Doctor's first visit to that part of that island, and he is much pleased with the prospects of the people. He says that for contentment and true rural happiness the farmers and their families are a model. Although some of the farms are not apparently very good, the people lack for nothing. They are as a rule well read, and intelligent in the questions of the day. The roads are much better than the majority of the streets in Victoria. There is now a gang of men building bridges and improving the roads where improvement is needed. The Presbyterian missionary, Mr. Campbell, out there is doing good work. He returns to college next week.
