

their cruisers, and that the negroes arrive here already instructed by them; and it has been told me as positive, that among those arrived lately many speak English." The writer is apparently ignorant that the Carolina slave-breeders speak English, and that, they are not bred in England.—Times.

LORD ROSSE'S MONSTER TELESCOPE.

Hood's Magazine.—The most remarkable paper in the entire number, and perhaps the most interesting one that has for a long time appeared in any magazine, describes the first experiments made with Lord Rosse's monster telescope; an instrument which promises to reveal many facts in reference to the celestial bodies, so startling as almost to defy belief. The description of the party who were invited to this first view of things which eye of mortal had never before scanned, with the details of the effects which the optical revelations had upon them, is quite exciting, in its strange vividness; whilst the facts discovered settle points long in doubt, and open to the mind a broad vista of promise for future discovery.—Pictorial Times.
