THE RESERVENCE OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY

(From our own Correspondent.)

The mission of Langavin and Caron to Qua-bec has failed. What that mission was I do not exactly know, but it has failed, lament ably failed, and the two ministers will return to Ottawa discomfited men. There was, as you know, a Cabinet meeting on Friday. All we know about that meeting is that it was a box until I am stormy one: that Ross refused to resign: While saying that he would not recommend the Lieutenaut. Governor to send for Angers or any ontsider: that Lynch and Blanchet offered to surrender their portfolios: that Ross would not accept them: that Langevin fuiled to carry his point in likely to be in cajoling or bullying the Premier, and that it in favor of the was decided to call the House and settle the duestion of Who is Who in a constitutional This is the way our information runs, way. This is the way our information runs, and I think you will find it pretty near the and I think you will find it pretty near the truth. And, if true, the Province will rejoice. It will rejoice because it has a Premier who will not be forced to act illegally, trickly, and endanger the constitution itself by a violation of its spirit. Now, look at the question this way—Here is a man who has been held up a paragen of political perfection by all his party friends. He has been described are a road wan an honest man a lit becomes and orders them described as a good man, an honest man, a tion. It become loyal man, and one whose sense of honor was declared to be keen and touchey. He leads trim your sail his party to the polls and is beaten, and yet selves hostile these same men, who rang the welkin with as not to of his praises before the election, now attempt to treat him with cold ingratitude because he failed to lead his party to success. If it be a higher voted. There rictue to deserve ruccess than to command Curran did it, t, then Premier Ross, according to his friends, has deserved it and those friends should membered in now stand loyally by side. And if they only look at the situation and all its difficulties. They may s they cannot but come to the conclusion that League if the Premier is acting wisely in determining and talk to support the spirit, and as well the letter, of the constitutional practice. Just look at the obstacles the men who wish to override Henry and O'C public opinion have to overcome:-

In the first place they must get rid of Premier Ross. Well, let us suppose, for the sake of debate, that they succeed, which I hold is most unlikely. Well, then:—

To the country let us well, then:— In the second place they must find another Government w lender. If it is Mathieu, they must give him the independent session of it is Angers, they must give him the independent free to do as he as much more. Well, let us suppose that turn the trail money is no object, and that they succeed in that, too. In the third place the new premier must men be voted form his government. This would be a diffi. I Irishman who in the way.

In the lifth place, could this new premier, after overcoming all these difficulties, command a m jority in the House? If not, sure as God m would either Judges Mathieu or Angers leave | Irish "Home the beach to become the leader of an Opposi- | pipes and smo tion in the Legislature?

And in the sixth place, will Lieutenant-Governor Masson consent to all these schemes and endanger his reputation as a constitu-tional statesman by lending himself to a course that public opinion cannot but regard as dangerous, illegal, and inimical to the public service? No one here seriously the proprietors, believes that he will. I know that he has said that he will not be forced to and square deal act unconstitutionally at the command of Ottawa. He has been heard to say, that come what will, he will act up to the spirit, as well as within the letter of the law and constitutional urages. And I am disposed to believe that Premier Ross and Lieutenaut Governor Masson thoroughly understand each other on that point; that they to the constitutional practice, and that they will thus earn the esteem of their political opponents, as they have already to the Consolution opponents, as they have already to the constitutional factority. opponents, as they have already won the respect of their supporters. This is the complexion of the political situation of the pol stand it to-day, and it goes to prove that the Premier and the Lieutenaut-Governor will not sacrifice "all for the party and nothing for the state."

IRISH FRENCH-CANAMANS.

'I was travelling in the county of Nicolet a short time ago. I was going to a place where there is an Irish settlement, or, rather, where the French Canadians and Irish are about equally divided in the parish. As we approached our destination I saw a man on the road, and as I was somewhat shaken by the continued jestling and bumping of the buckboard as it thumped along over the road, I thought I would get down and have a walk, and a chat with the pedestrian who was heading in the same direction as myself. And I was soon broadside with him, and bidding him "Good-dav" in Brench, he half sturned his head, and, exhibiting a bright, genial Irish face, he said to me, in a brogue as rich as I ever heard on my native heath, Good-day, kindly." That phrase struck home, and, coming as it did with all its rich. deep music in its tones, as mellow as ever uttered beneath the shadow of the Gaitees or on the banks of the Barrow or the Ban, I felt its influence with electrical force and complacent self-assurance. There could be no mistake about it. There was the face as Irish as ever beamed on the fervid; countenance of a Gallowglass. Of course I telt at home at once, and turning to my newly-found acquaintance I said, "Ah, I see you are, like myself, un Irishman. There are so few of our people in these parts that it is refreching to meet a son of the sod." And then that Irish face was turned towards me, while with speaking eyes the men in his rich and beautiful brogge said :—
"Oh no, six; indede I am a French Canadian and a good one too at that." "A what," I asked in astonishment, "a French Canadian! But surely your father or your mother must have been Irish, or, in the name of all the sainty, where did you get that rich Irish brogue of yours, a brogue which makes me, as an Irishman, lean towards you in national sympathy just as naturally as water runs down kill." And then he said. "Well, you uq, sir, I have lived here all myllic. I have up, sir, I have lived here all myllic. I have up, sir, I have up, sir, in sir, i pan (1) It has not been contaminated iro a may outside source. As the Irish set tenent here is in a great measure cut off from all other English speaking people, they speak in the same way now as the day when It Ireland, and, as a matter of course, d "we French-Canadians speak the English as we near her spoke." And so I remarking what a fodlish appearance such a I found i. in other cases when I reached my contour gives an individual. plus of nine millions.

It is popularly supposed that the high forehead is essential to a good brain, and intellectual superiority is usually associated with the conception of a "two-storied brow." Br. Wm. H. Mays ably combats this idea in the Western Lancet. He says "The size of the forehead depends much on the line of growth of hair that limits it. A man may have what is called a low forehead; but if the hair could be removed to the height of four or five inches, the same individual would present a fine specimen of the traditional noble forehead us could be wiebed, u perfect 'dome of thought,' particularly if the frontal sinuses happened to be large or protuberant. Again, a low fore-head has ever been held as a sign of beauty in woman, and has certainly never been regarded as an impeachment of her mental capacity. The truth is, the front part of the brain has very little to do higher faculties of the mind are associated. Gower assigns to the frontal lobes, excepting their lower and hinder portions, a negative position as regards physical importance. Galy man possesses rosterior or occipital lobes; they are the latest achievements in the long line of cerebral develop-ment. In the higher apes they may be found in a very rudimentary condition; the lower mammals possess frontal or anterior lobes only. In the lower savages, and in congenial idiots, the occipital lobes are often ill developed, approaching the firsts type, giving a flattened appearance to the back of the head. In the Stockton Asylum ter.
