ANNEX E

MAJOR RESEARCH PROJECTS

APRIL 1990–MARCH 1991

ARMS CONTROL AND DISARMAMENT

In-house

Karen Ballentine began her research on the problems of conversion in the Soviet defence industry.

Jean-François Rioux did research on arms proliferation and organized a major international conference on supply-side arms control.

Commissioned

“The Proliferation of Nuclear Weapons,” Albert Legault (Centre québécois de relations internationales), principal researcher.

CANADIAN DEFENCE AND SECURITY POLICY

In-house

Roger Hill completed his term as Research Director and focussed on his own research, especially an oral history of Canada's role in NATO and an analysis of future Canadian defence policy. He also chaired a special panel on the renewal of NORAD for a sub-committee of the House of Commons.

George Lindsey co-authored a study with former DND Fellow Col. Joe Sharpe on aerospace surveillance and worked on a follow-up article on the policy implications of the study.
He also began a larger project on “The Modernization of Weapons and Prospects for Multilateral Arms Control.”

Commissioned

“National Defence and the Canadian Economy,” Paul Buteaux (University of Manitoba), principal researcher.

PEACEKEEPING, PEACEMAKING AND PEACEBUILDING

In-house

Robin Hay continued his research on the civilian aspects of peacekeeping and peacebuilding, with special reference to the case of Namibia.

Commissioned

“The Research Centre for International Organizations,” Paul Dussault (University of Ottawa), principal researcher.

“Escalation and Mediation,” Brian Tomlin, Harald von Riekhoff, and Brian Mandell (Carleton University), principal researchers.

“Aid as Peacemaker: Canadian Development Assistance and Third World Conflicts,” Robert Miller (Parliamentary Centre), principal researcher.

“The Future of the UN System,” John Trent and Paul Dussault (University of Ottawa), and Gene Lyons (Dartmouth College), principal researchers.

REGIONAL CONFLICTS AND SECURITY ISSUES

In-house

Deirdre Collings managed a collaborative workshop series on the conflict in Lebanon, focussing on the written report of the first and second sessions and preparations for the third on “Obstacles, Challenges and Prospects for Peace.”

Ron Fisher managed the reporting phase of another collaborative project – on conflict in Cyprus – and organized a follow-on conference. He also completed a manuscript on “The Potential of Third Party Consultation as a Method of International Conflict Resolution.”

Mark A. Heller took up the position of Research Coordinator and continued his own work on Middle Eastern security issues.

Ross Mallick undertook a study on the potential contribution of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation to regional confidence-building and conflict resolution.

Commissioned

“Indian Naval Expansion and New Delhi's Regional Political Objectives,” by Paul George (independent consultant).

“Remaining Obstacles to Peace in Central America,” by Harold Klepak (Collège Militaire Royal de St.-Jean).

“Managing Conflict in Southeast Asia,” David Dewitt and Paul Evans (York University), principal researchers.

“Canadian Policy Towards South Africa,” Heribert Adam (Simon Fraser University) and Kogila Moodly (University of British Columbia),
principal researchers.

NEW THREATS AND APPROACHES TO INTERNATIONAL SECURITY

In-house

Shaukat Hassan began to monitor environmental challenges to international security.

Fr. William Ryan planned a series of seminars held in the spring of 1991 on religion in international affairs.

Commissioned

“New Approaches to International Security,” David Dewitt (York University), David Haglund (Queen's University), and John Kirton (University of Toronto), principal researchers.

THE ARCTIC

In-house

Ron Purver served as Acting Coordinator of Research in the fall of 1990 and continued to work primarily in the areas of naval arms control and Arctic security problems and to prepare a workshop series on Arctic issues.
