The later news since our article of Sept. 18 indicates that the wheat crops of Russia, the Balkan provinces and Austria-Hungary are all proving to be more deficient than was then reported. On the other hand, the prospects for the growing crops in South America, India and Australia are, so far, very promising. Even with good crops in these southern countries if will require attractive prices in importing countries to obtain the supplies of foreign wheat which they will require before the harvest of 1898. On this question of provest of 1898. On this question of probable supply and requirements, we append the following letter in The Corn

.19 Trade News, Oct. 26: Mr. George Broomhall. Mr. George Broomnall,

'Sir,—It seems to me that your estimate for this year's requirements for Europe is a little too low. When sufficient consideration is given to the fact that in all countries farmers' deliveries that in all countries farmers' deliveries in the first few months after harvest are always considerably greater than the average for the whole year, the steadiness of prices affords a fair indication that the large shipments this season from Russia and North America are not considered dangerously heavy. May I submit the following for the consideration of the trade.

The world's probable surpluses and requirements of wheat, crop year 1897-
