The vim and enthusiasm with which the collegians performed their work was the subject of remark after two battalions had completed the field exercises, which were the last activity outlined in the syllabus drawn up by Major Bickford.
His royal highness expressed himself as being much impressed with the appearance of the men, and commented pearance of the men, and commented on the fact that there were university

"The best thing I have ever seen for training and efficiency," said General Lessard, referring to the work of the COC-T. camp in general. He said that as a result of his inspection he had found the interior economy to be excellent. The field work was also said to be very satisfactory. The McGill force left camp about an hour and a half later, marching out past the Chautauqua rifle ranges. The advance guard of the invaders, under the command of Capt. Massey, caught sight of the enemy not far from the rifle 'range, and the engagement started at 11.15. The defenders took shelter in a wood which had 500 yards of clearing in front of it. of clearing in front of it. Across this the invaders attack burst, and under their fire the defence was forced to retire a short distance. The engagement was quiet brief, as the attack developed rapidly. A flanking move-ment was attempted by the U. of T. companies under Capt. Madill. This drew the attention of the enemy in one direction, and under cover of the general action the overseas company was able to slip past on the other flank and attain the object of the attack.

The conduct of both parties was ighly commended by the Duke and Generals Hughes and Lessard as well. The men break camp at noon on Sat-

Yesterday was the quietest day since the operations began exactly a fortnight ago. Save for an occasional boom silence settled down on this war racked area. During the night, however, gun flashes were again illuminating successfully. Today's operations presented some interesting features. The fact that the Turks are concentrating their fire towards the narrows is a good indication of the progress that we have made. I could plainly see the shells sending up great

Thompson, B.A., before a large audience at the annual meeting of the Toronto Horticultural Society, held at Foresters' Hall last night.

The speaker traced the history of the sarden from the year 1760, when they were composed of an area of nine acres, to their present pretentious proportions of 288 acres. Professor Thompson's address was illustrated by a series of slides portraying visits of woodland glades, and sylvan beauty. Especially interesting was the discourse on the Victoria Regia, an immense water lily, discovered in the Amazon basin in 1801. This plant is seven feet across, with flowers fifteen inches wide, and is capable of supporting a person. Reference was also made to the fact that society had supplied seventien hundred families with seeds at a cost of $107.
