NEW AUTOMOBILE FUEL MADE FROM CHEMICALS AT TWO CENTS PER GALLON

Aged Long Island Inventor Interests Henry Ford in His New "Gasoline"-Will Have a Special Demonstration on Wednesday.

NEW YORK, April 22 .- Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, went to mingdale, L.I., yesterday, to see Louis richt. the man who says he can make tor fuel out of water for two cents a ion. Mr. Ford came from Dearborn, th., on representations made to him his agents here, who had been imposed by performances of Mr. Enhis agents here, who had been imposed by performances of Mr. Enhis automobiles after they had reved injections of the mysterious fluid to demonstration of the liquid was en to Mr. Ford. The inventor said he is just out of the chemicals necessary make the liquid. Mr. Enricht had not mable to buy any chemicals for some ie, he declared, because secret agents re trailing him everywhere to steal his rention. But Mr. Ford had a four hours' talk the inventor, and was so well assed with the personality of the aged in that he agreed forthwith to give has been ford automobile, which Mr. e automobile manufacturer, went to Enricht. the man who says he can make motor fuel out of water for two cents a gallon. Mr. Ford came from Dearborn, Mich., on representations made to him by his agents here, who had been impressed by performances of Mr. Enricht's automobiles after they had received injections of the mysterious fluid. No demonstration of the liquid was given to Mr. Ford. The inventor said he was just out of the chemicals necessary to make the liquid. time, he declared, because secret agents were trailing him everywhere to steal his invention.

But Mr. Ford had a four hours' talk with the inventor, and was so well pleased with the personality of the aged man that he agreed forthwith to give him a new Ford automobile, which Mr. Enricht will prepare fer a special demonstration for Mr. Ford next Wednesday in Long Island City. If this demonstration proves to Mr. Ford's satisfaction that a real substitute for gasoline has been found, he will buy the whole invention outright. Mr. Enricht declared, and will give it to the world.

No Price Set on Invention.

No price has been set upon the value of his invention by Mr. Enricht. He expresses the belief that if Mr. Ford is convinced he has solved the problem he will pay amply. There will be no stockselling schemes, Mr. Enricht says, althonumerous offers have been made to start companies capitalized at from $1,000,000 to $10,000,000.

No indication of Mr. Ford's real opinion of Mr. Enricht's invention could be obtained, the manufacturer contenting himself with making only this comment: "While I did not see a demonstration of the new liquid, on account of Mr. Enricht being out of certain chemicals, I am greatly interested in the man himself. I was much impressed by his sincerity. We will have a demonstration in Long Island City in the near future."

With Mr. Ford was Gaston Plantiff, his personal representative, and Theodore Delavigne, and while they were having luncheon at Brown's Hotel the news of their arrival spread thru the village. With some persons following in automobiles, Mr. Ford and his party went to Mr. Enricht's home, in Fulton street. They found the inventor in his little garage, tinkering at his motors. Mr. Enricht immediately came out. Neither the inventor nor the manufacturer had seen each other before, but neither will forget the other now. Mr. Enricht is a picturesque-looking man, about 75 years old, very tall, very erect, and with a wide flowing moustache, that would mark him in any crowd of thousands than six feet tall, and towered high above the automobile manufacturer.

Henry Ford Impressed.

The inventor and manufacturer immediately went into the house and held their own counsel. They were together until after four o'clock. They came out together, entered the little fleet of automobiles gathered around, and drove back to Brown's Hotel, where they all had dinner together. Neither would discuss together, entered the little fleet of automobiles gathered around, and drove back to Brown's Hotel, where they all had dinner together. Neither would discuss the details of their conference, except to say that the general situation was talked over. Mr. Enricht gave Mr. Ford full and free information, told him the number of chemicals he used in his solution, just how it might be prepared, its properties, its effect on the motor, its combustion properties, and how he had discovered his liquid.

The automobile Mr. Ford is to give to the inventor will be the usual one, with the exception that it will be geared a little higher than the stock car. This is because Mr. Enricht says his chemically prepared water has much more explosive force than gasoline and hence can drive a higher gear with more ease. The automobile will be sent to Mr. Enricht on Monday, and he will have a day for experimenting on it in any way he may see fit so that it will give the best possible results at the test.

Mr. Ford does not assume any responsibility. He is taking the position merely that if Mr. Enricht has what he declares he has and can prove it, then he is willing to let the world at large have it. Mr. Enricht says the whole thing is so simple that any one can make it, and if a company should be formed to market the fuel the man who bought the first gallon could make all the rest himself. Mr. Enricht frankly says he wants to get as much money out of it as he can, and he believes the only way is to sell it either to some public spirited man who can afford to give it to the world or to sell it to the government.

Simple Matter to Prove.

"My invention is either a fake or it is genuine." said Mr. Enricht, who talks affably and looks you square in the eye. "It would be a very simple matter to prove that it cannot operate an automobile, if it cannot. I have been working on the chemicals for four years now and I have been driving my cars on the fuel for a long time. I have not bought a gallon of gasoline since last Thanksgiving, except the o the war on the continent has confirmed the story that heavy concussions bring down rain. The past March has made a record for all history as a wet spring month. The rainfall officially recorded in London was 4.67 inches, against an average in March of 1.75. The number of wet days in the month was twenty-two. It rained for 133.6 hours, and there were only lifty-one hours of sunshine. These figures are for London. DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

one of the finest programs of sporting events ever held in the city at the great entertainment organized by the Second Division Amateur Athletic Association at Riverdale Park on Saturday afternoon. The marathon race drew the attention of everybody on the grounds and those living in the neighborhood of the park. Forty-seven entries were received for the event, which was won in fine style by Corp. Jim Corkery, 180th Batt., who beat Corp. Tom Longboat, 180th Batt., in the last few laps by a good margin. The entries included in addition to Longboat and Corkery several well-known runners, among them being George Ernie Wood, and Percy Sellers.

At 2.45 thirty-nine runners started in the race at the Gerrard street end of the park, the course being laid along the Don up Winchester. Hill, and down Broadview avenue. Corkery, who only arrived from Boston at noon, led for the first mile or so, with Longboat and Black not far behind. In a few minutes the great majority of the runners were far behind with Longboat in the lead and Corkery and Black followins. On the second turn the steep hill proved a stumbling block to many of the runners, but the above three ran incely down Broadview avenue, Corkery still being second, with Black at striking distance. Considerable speed was put on in the last lap, and Corkery ran away-from Longboat, beating him by about ten yards. Black was third, being 20 yards behind.

Byrne was fourth, Bolton fifth, Hill sixth and Allen seventh.

In commenting on the race afterward, several prominent runners stated that despite the peculiar circumstances, the race was an excellent one.

The three winners were all members of the Sportsmen's Battalion. The course was estimated at about ten miles, the contestants traversing the circuit three times.

The boxing contests were referred by Lieut. Lou Marsh. The first bout was between Pte. S. Shea of the 180th and Pte. F. W. Lansing of the 168th. It was a runaway for the former, and the bout was stopped in the second round. In the final for the 135-pound class, Pte. Stroud of the 92nd met Shea, but was knocked out in the third round.

There was ne stopping Danny Johnston in his fight with Pte. J. Olson of the 92nd. The latter was all in when the bout was stopped at the end of the first round. bout was stopped at the end of the first round.

Ptes. Ted Picton and Chas. Christie of the 180th fought hard, and the bout ended with honors even.

In the heavyweight class, Pte. Chummy Banks could have wiped the floor with Pte. Foster of the 22nd, The former knew too much about boxing for Foster, but let him down easy.

The great fight of the afternoon came when Danny Johnston of the 180th met Pte. Painter of the 92nd in the 145-pound class. For three rounds they went at it hammer and tongs, and an extra round had to be boxed. Johnston got the decision.

had to be boxed. Johnston got the decision.

In the bayonet fighting an exhibition bout was put on early in the afternoon between Sergt. Cruxton of the 95th and Sergt. Andrews of the headquarters staff. The sport is quite new to Toronto people and aroused a good deal of amusement and enthusiasm. Sergt. Andrews won the bout by three points to two. Following the boxing further fights were staged between Corp. Rouhan and Sergt. Andrews; Sergt. Rainbow and Sergt. Cruxton; Corp. Desilet and Sergt. Wade. In the semi-finals Sergt. Andrews beat Wade by three straight points, and in the final beat Cruxton by three points to two. NATIONAL GUN CLUB.
