Col. Thomas Turner, of Mt. Sterling, Tenn., recently, was considerably surprised to be met by a strange young lady who threw her arms around his neck and kissed him. He had scarcely recovered from this salutation when a second young lady, very handsome, evidently a sister of the first, a'so rushed after him, and greeted him in a similiarly affectionate manner. Then the blushing colonel drew back, and wanted to know if there was any more and what it all meant. The young ladies took a second and closer look, gave a little scream of dismay, and disappeared. They had expected a long absent uncle, who closely resembled Col. Turner, and he is now going from hotel to hotel looking for young ladies who are expecting uncles.
