Charles McCarthy was the smallest boy seen in the dock for a long time. When he stood up his head could not be seen over the rail, and he was obliged to stand on the bench. The charge against him was stealing $25 from the house of James Gordon in Duke street. He acknowledges taking the money and says he gave it to a woman. His father is dead and his mother refused to go to the police court to look after her almost infant son. The Magistrate sent for her, as the law requires the guardian of juventure of the commons of Canada in properties.

Shall reflect constrained, however santly, to withdraw myself from the number of your supporters.

It seems to me that the issue is not now whether Mr. Burpee did right or not in taking the course which he did, that is to say, whether or not he ought to have come out in opposition to the Government when the charges were first made by Hon. Mr. Huntington. It is, on the contrary, whether a Government is justified in receiving an enormously large sum of money from a public contract of the country. It can surely be no answer to say that the opposite party did the same thing. It is all wrong in the nature of a political "indiscretion," and one which might have been overlooked, or whether more immoral in the nature of a political indiscretion," and one which might have been overlooked, or whether more immoral in published by the Commons of Canada in
