Cheating at the Circus.

To the Editor of the Tribune.

At the Circus, last night, while I was getting change for the tickets, I was swindled in a bold and most ungentle manly manner. Being half an hour late. I did not trouble to make my change, so I handed the man at the box a $8 note, and at the same time asked the price of the tickets. He answered, "Half a dollar," and gave me a handfull of silvir saying, "Here's your change." I took it, and, going to the light, in company with a friend, I counted it on the spot, and I had only $3.37, instead of $4, after taking out the price of two tickets. Mr. Owen is to have a complimentary benefit on Monday evening, and will offer a rich, rare and racy bill of fare. It will be the first benefit he ever had in St. John, and we hope his tender sensibilities may not be wounded by a poor house. He is a thorough artist, and his conscientious devotion to the work of making the people laugh should be rewarded. Write in your diaries—"Monday, August 17th, Benefit of William F. Owen—I'll take Her to the Academy and hear Her laugh."
