

that is God-given and should be so appreciated. I shall be glad to make your acknowledgements to the Club, though I am sure they feel the debt is entirely ours. They have not done anything of your splendid address. My husband's suggestion is that you should not lose the smallest opportunity of helping yourself to the public eye, albeit you will pardon my mentioning this. I do hope you will some day speak before the Canadian Club. Women you know are ³²³²⁵ public agents. The audience there would be larger - more fashionable, but not more appreciative. All the men who heard you that day agreed that it was a magnificent effort and would easily place you in the front rank of our public speakers. I am glad if my remarks in introducing you to the Club were acceptable. That is the day. That too little remembered page in our history looks to me I every word was my
