

natural harbor and waterfront could be developed for the benefit of the attention of the citizens from time to time, and which has been piecemeal fashion by various City Councils of the past. That the Great Lakes should mean something, not only in the way of dollars and cents to the fortunate municipality which owned it, but of the people's thoughts, and has been expressed occasionally in the past and its expression never until the last two years became so important to its present prosperous condition with a population of 425,000.

In connection with the harbor-equipment, which need not be particularized as a progressive policy of harbor development. The matter was discussed by the Toronto Board of Trade and the City Council, a plan was submitted to the people, with the result that a Commission was submitted to the people, with the result that a Commission incorporating a new Board of Harbor Commissioners in connection with the management and development of the Harbor of Toronto and the im-

There has been in existence a Harbor Board which has very limited powers. In addition to the Ashbridge Bay District, which property is owned by the City, and the formation of a Commission to develop and manage it. It was suggested that one Commission could administer the new board was constituted for that purpose.
