THE RUEBEC TRANKCRIPTT,

 Vol. II.]

TUESDAY, 24т DECEMBER, 1839.

[ No. 128

LONDON STATIONARY Phave $\mathrm{T}^{\mathrm{HE}}$ Subscribess have received supplies of The following articles of PLAIN and ANCY SCATIONARY, viz:ANCHE

Wriuing paper:

 Drawing Paper.

 moll

 Hivastrad coneration

Thet, amo tan sinuate, ace.

 - A Silver lak; Coomb's Poeket Inkstands. Misesilinnesas.
1, Silver, and imitation Gold Paper; Mo-ceo, Coloured, and Fancy Paper:
; Tissuen Pa is and zilt ; black, red and faney colioured aling Wax; Moneco and plain Leather PookAling Waxi. Moruceo and plain Leaither Poek-Book With or without steel clasps ; embossed 1 plain Ponfolios ; patent 'everpointed Pencil 1 plain Porfolios; 1 Plent 'everpointed Pencil nother Presared Parch. ent, ediferent inzes of the finest quality ; Riddees universal Pea Iders i Gold Borders, and Gold Paper Ornapte; Plain and elegant Snuff Boxes; Rodger', Kaives : Tapers and Taper Stands Serees Kkavees; Tapers apd Taper Stands: Scereen Mindes; Musie Paper, in quires and in booke pie paper eolourd and embossed, of varioum CiPenefle, of different qualities; ; Slates and ef Peneils; I Iadia Rabber, patent and eommon; Stanps; alabaster Cund bronzed Letter ting of Ledger Hooke. ting of Ledger Journals, Day Books, Chek Books, Reled Memorandam Books, Books, &e ${ }_{5}$ Books, te Books made to order W. Cowan & son

DFFICE FOR MILITIA CLAIMS, Quebec, 25th July, 1839. BLIC NOTICE, is hereby given, that , published op to this day, is required to be the Provineial Secretary, the Honorable CEXALV, between this and che FIRST day The fees shall not have been paid at that ste therwise disposed of es recognized, where the land loeated will med for non-wayment of patent fees as the parties win-payment only be entitited to Scrip ae parties will only be entitited to Scrip, aed for terne of nominal value thereof, accord-and of Durham', Proela T 1 ith September, Is38, provided appliea

By Command
dEAN LANGEVIN
Secretary-
ten thousand a-year

(Continued.)

" 1 hope, gents, that paper's all right, eh 1 " said he, supported by the bramdy, which he had nearly finished. They turned towards him with a smile of momentary
 Now what he had hinted at, as tar as he could venture to do so, was a thought thac glanced across ture to do so, was a thought that glaneed across, his as yet unsettled bruin, that there might have been invoked more than mere been invokedsetioned than merre carthly gasostance; but he prudently pressed the mather no father but he prudently pressed the matter no farther-that was all Mesps. Quirk, Gammon, and Snap' look out hat was all Messrs. Quirk, Gammon, and Snap's look out; he had been no party to anything of the sort, nor would he, knowingly. He also nbserved the same shects of paper written all ove,', which Mr. Gameon had filled at his (Titmouse's) room the night befo the night before; and many new and zaore old Tooking papers and parchments. Someumes they addressed questions $\begin{aligned} & \text { him, but found it diffie le to } \\ & \text { keep his autention }\end{aligned}$ keep his attention ap to any thing that was said to him tor the wil visions that were chasing one another through his heated brain ; the passage of another through his heated brain; the passage of which said visions was not a hittle accelerated by the large tumbler of brandy and water which he had just taken.
"Then, in fact," said Mr. Gammon, as the three vimultanenusly sat down, after "Precisely so," said Mr, Quirk, emphatically.
" To be sure, ", eonfidently added \$napp ; whio having devoted himself exelusively all his life to the sharpest practice of the comot called, knew aboute as muche of real property law as a shipe; but it would not to do appear ignorant as a sipe; hut it would not to do appear ignorant, or taking no part in the matter, in tho presence of the heir at law, and the fature great elient of the House: Well, Mr. Titmonse,"" at length said Mr. Quirk laying aside his glases taken, but it appears to me that your right is clear, and has been clear these ten or twelve years, to the aid iemediate enjoyment of a very five estate in the north of Enflayd, worth $\& 9,000$ or $E 10,000 \mathrm{a}$ year, at the leant at the least I 't say so ! "
"Yo don
"We do indeed; and are very proad and happy indeed to he the hooored instrumento of establishing $y^{\text {our rights my dear sir, said } M \mathrm{M} \text {. Gammon. }}$ ing Yoer rights, my dear sir,' said Mp. Gammonor twelve years is my money, wis it"
" If we are right, $i$ is undoubtedy as you say," answered Mr. Quirk
"There'll be
"There'll be a jolly reckoning for some one, Then, hoortly -h ! My eyea!" " hen, shortly $=$ eh My eyes !", " eried Mr. Gam-
"Ah, my dear Mr. Timouse, mon, with subdued ecotacy a a befare his mon, with subdeed ecstacy, al befure his mind's eye rose visions of interminable proceedinge at lais, papers," with Quires, Ganumen," and Snap, at the boitom of each of them, nid contantly under the eye of the court and the bar, and before the public. (the same kind of thoughts must have passed through Snap's mind, for hee rubbed his hands is silenge with "My dear Mr.Titmouse, you have a most just regard for your own interests ; there will be a reekoning, and a very terrible one, erelong, for somebody-but we've time enoush fcr all that Only let us have the unspeakable happiness of seeing you conce fairly in possenios of your estates ing you once fairly in possessina of your estates, and our office shall h luow no rest till you bave go Mr. Quirk, $k$, oiousty accoanguodating themself to the taste and apprebension of his exctited auditor the taste and apprebension of his excited auditor es Those that must give up the giblets also- ha, ha, ha !" Mears. Gamamon and Snap echoed the ha, ha f he head of the firme. joke of
"Ha, ha, ha !" laugheid
"Ha, ha, ha ! " langhed Mr. Titmouse, fimmen-eely excited by the conjoint influence of the branely exicited by the conjoint iniluence of the brandy and the news of the night; "capital ! eapital ! hyurrah! Such goings on there will be! You're all of the right sort, I see ! Law for ever! Let me thake hands with you all gents Come, if you phease, all to-gether all frends to-nifht! And he grapped eanch of the three readily-proferred ne grasped ench of the fhree readiny-proferred right hands of Messrs. Quirk, Gammon, and Snap, with an energy that was likely to make all the win an energy that was likely to make all the high contracting parties to that quadruple alliance rement remember its ratification "And is it all a ready-money affair, gents-or rent and all that kind of thing /" "Why, almost entirely the letter," answered Quirk," except the accumulatiuns." Quirk, " except the acecumulationss"" "Then 'ma great fadodlord, am I ", indeed, my dear Mr. Titmouse, you are-(that is, moless we have made a bluider such as our house is not often in the habit of making)- and have two, very fine houses in different parts of the country, very fine houses in different parts of the conatry.
"Capital! delighful! I II livi in both of them ouch goings on And is it quile up to ths mark

"We really entertain no doubt,"
"And ach as I can spead all of it, every year 1 "" "Certainly - no doubt of it - not the least. The "Certainly-no doubt of it-not the least. The rents are paid with most exemplary-at least," added Mr. Gammon, with a enstivating, an irresie-tible smile, and taking hima affectionately by the hand- "at least they will be, a, theis fairly in our managemeat." he enguired briskly. The three protners bowed, with the nost deprecatingly disinterested air in the world, intimation World, intimating that, for his sake, they were ready to take upon themselves even that troublewume responsibibity ! be better! coulda't be bet-"Capital ! couldn't be "Capital! couldn't be better! couldn't be bet ter : Ah, ha, ha-"ou"ve catched the goose, an must bring me its esf,", Mh, ha, hal a touch is your line, old gents! your has, ha, ha excellent ! ah, ha, ha ! " laughed He Ha, ha, artex at the wit of their mi weilient.
Mr. Titmouse jerined them, and snapped his fingers in the air. I'se just thou, it of Dowlas, Tag-rag " Lord-pary and Company's--1 seem as if 1 hadn't seen or heard and Company's- 1 seem as if 1 hadn't seen or heare of fitem for Lord knows log.-but there they are fancy old Tag-rag making me a beggar on the 10 th of next month-ha, ha, ha !-shan't see that "There! " whispered Mr. Gampon, apprehensively in the ear of Mr Quirk; "didu'? tell you itat that hat that would be it ?, We've been monstrousl "It won't do to go back to that-eugh $1-$ eh ? will it ? you know what I mean! Faney Tittlebat Titmouse standing bebind-" The partners looked rather blank
"We could venture to suggest, Mr. Titmouse, aid Mr. Gammon, seriously, the abolute net aity there is for every thing, on your part and our parts to go on as quietly as before, for a ittle time to come; to be surs and safe, my dear sir, we "Oh, I see gents! I see; mum-mam's the word, inr the present! But, I muat say, if ther is any pr. whon I want to hear of it, sooner than "Dowdy, Rag-bar and Co., I sappose! ha, ha, ha! iaterupted Mr. Nammob, his partaers echoing. hiv augh.
Ha, ha, ha! ha!" echoed Mr. Titcouse ; who, getting up ou of his ehnir, could not rexist ; eapering to tond and fro in something of the attitude of a sate some thing of the atuitude of a slage-dancer, whisi ling and humeming by turas, and indulging in various other wild sitits rious other wild antics. quired, interrupting an earnest low-toned conver "bibl, of oourse, someme delay is unavoftable. All we have done, as yet, is to diseover that, as far as we have done, as yet, is to diseover that, as far aat we are advised, and can judge, you are the right oware a but very extensive operations mast be im-owner; mediately commenced, before you ean be ve in possession. There are some who won't be pesuaddd to drop $\varepsilon 10,000 \mathrm{a}$-year out of their hands for "The devill there are ! Who are they that want " Weep to kep me loger out of what's my own !- what' untly wise ? Hh ? 1 want to know Haven' (they kept me out long enowght d - bow them ! Put' eas in prison directly-don't spare 'em-raseals!"
"They'll probably, ere long, find their way in "Thent poor devil, the mesne profit"" "Slean profits ?- is that you eall them, gonts ? It's rogue s, money-vinam'sprofits? don't ppare 'em-he's roibed the fatherless, whiel "My dear Mr. Titmouse," said Gammon grave Y, "we are getting on teo fast-dreadfuly fist. It will never do : matters of such lumens of , in thise way these canat be hurried on,
"I like that, sir !-I do, d- $!$ " "Yrou will really, if you go on in this wild way, Mr. Titmouse, make us regret the trouble we have taken in the affair, and eapeeielily the promptaess with whieh we have communicated to you the extent of your good fortune."
"Beg pardon, Pm oure, gents, but mean no offence am monstrous obliged to yoa for what you've done for me-but, by Jove, t's talken me ratber a-tack, Iown, to bear that' Pm to be kept, so long out of it all. Why can't you offer him, Whoever he is that has my property, a handsome num to go out at onee? Gente .lit own to you 'mang muneommon low-never so low in my life -d-d low ! Done tp, and can't get what's justly mine ! What an I to do in the mean while $?$ Con"You are rather excited just now, Mr. Titmouse," said Mr. Quirk, seriously; "suppose we now break up, and resume oar coaversainon to morrow, when we are all in better and calmer "trim "'" "No, sir, thanking you all the same ; but I think we'd better $\mathrm{g}^{\circ}$ on on with it now " replied Titmouse, impetuously. "Do you think I can stoop to o back to that nasty, beastly shop, and stand behind " Our decided "pinion in worth offering" "That remainst to eseen," said Titmouse, with a petish shake of the tead.

Thile loog in in your premat ntatation'/ "What 1 own Tag-rag fo: my marter-abd I worth $£ 10,000 \mathrm{a}$-year $)$ "My dear sir, you've not got it yet," "Do you think you'd have told me what you have if you werent sure! No, no ! you've gone too far! I shall burst, I shall! Me to go on sit 6. ©re 1 -they use me worse and worse every day.
G Is, you'll excuse me-1 bope you will; bui bu-een, or, hr ving seen, appreciated, the looks whic the three fartaers interchanged. on hearing thia absurd, ungrateful, and insoleat speech of his-th expressson thar flited across their shrewd faces that was, mintense contempt for him, har'ly overhat was, mitense contempt for him, har ly over-mastered and concealed by a vivid percaption of their own interest, which was, of course, to manage, to sooth, to coneiliat him ! nage, to sooth, How the retile propopssities of his meen sature had tha iven beneath the sudden sumshine of onex pected prosperity '-See already trueulence, rapacity, in full play "So gents," said he, affer a long and keen ergo to-morrow morning to Dowlas 8 Cot, on with the cursed life I led there to-day as if no " ha gor preseut humour, Mr. Titmouse, it would be in vain to discuss the matter," said Mr. Quirk. "A gain I tell you that the corrse we hav recommended is in our opinion the proper cone; exeuse me if I add, what can you do but adopt ous empt being mede to stop bim, "Did you ever see such a little beast!" exel ed Mr. Gammon with an air of dieguet.

"Beggar on horsebuek " "uclaimed Saap. " It wgar't do however,' said Mr. Quirk, wilh we: elogrined as air as his parners, "f for sies to go at large in his present framz of mind-he m iy ruia "s As geod as $E 500$ - year ont of the way of the office," "nid Suap.

 dropped persaasion sweter than thiney, ind in should not be surprised if he were to be able is bring back that subborn piece of conceited ataplditw,
As soon as Mr. Titmoase heard the street door Ahut after him with a kind of bang, he saspeped bife finger ence or wice, by way of letting off a little of inger once or twice, by way of letting off hattie of the inflammable air that was in him, and muttered, "Pretty ehass tbose, upon my word I I'I expose them all! 1 I apply to the Lord Mayor. They're a pack of swindlers, they are : This in one wey they treat mee, who ve got a title to $\Sigma 10,000$ a-year another moment, and dismayy eame quickly over him ; for it suddenly occured to him what hold had he got on Messs. Quirk, Gammon \& Soap 7-what he got on Messrs. Quirk, Gammon eould he do f-what had he done f Ah-the goldea vision of the last few hours was fading away momentarily, like a dream ! Eaeh necosed of his deep and rapid reffection, rendere moin $x^{\text {say }}$ anoluer of thic repatana soien Thuout moll $=42$ - +2-2 youal oceur to you, and act as you may be advised, ", is Men "Monstrous kind of you io come and give me such good advice ${ }^{\text {" }}$ exclaimed Titmouse, with a sneer.
"Oh,
"
il
"I came out of pure good nature, to assure you entertaigo fice, notwithstanding what has pasied, wards you, in thus throwing off its hands a very "
"Hem " exclaimed Titmouse, once or twice: God bless you: Mr, Gammos, in the aet ot 16 turning to his door, extended his hand to Mr. To-tlebat, who he instantly perceived wat melting ra"illy. Why, sir-if I thought you all meant the correet thing-hem II say, the eorreet thing by me-I shouldu't so maeh mind a litte diesppontment for he time i but you mast own Mr. Gammon, it very hard beigg kept out of one's own no long."

