

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Readable and Attractive.

The first number of the UNIVERSITY QUARTERLY REVIEW comes to us from Toronto. In outward appearance and make up it is quiet and dignified. It promises to make itself the field for debate of all prominent questions of the day in Canada. It is not too heavy to be readable, nor too light to be attractive.—New York Independent.

Its Appearance is Most Opportune.

If the standard of the first number of the UNIVERSITY QUARTERLY REVIEW is kept up, and if, as seems the intention, it is made the medium for the presentation of the matured and well-considered views of the thoughtful and cultured men and women of Canada, then it will not only achieve a deserved success, but will have rendered a real service to the country, by raising the tone of debate, and by exerting a powerful and elevating influence upon the press, and through the press upon the people of the Dominion.—Evangelical Churchman, Toronto.

A Useful and Brilliant Future Before it.

If the quality of the first number be maintained, and we can see no reason why it should not be, the UNIVERSITY QUARTERLY REVIEW has a useful and brilliant future before it.—The Week, Toronto.

Research and Learning.

To widen and deepen the love of research and learning the QUARTERLY REVIEW will do much, if the articles published and the writers are on the same high level as those of the current number. The ablest controversialists of Canada will contribute from time to time.—The Globe, Toronto.

A Credit to the Country.

The number is an excellent one, and if the high standard set in it is maintained in subsequent issues, the UNIVERSITY QUARTERLY will be a credit to the country, and deserving of every encouragement at the hands of the more intelligent classes of readers.—The Mail, Toronto.

Strength and Variety.

The opening number of this new magazine of current Canadian thought is very promising. The Table of Contents indicates the high rank which this REVIEW will take if it maintains the present strength and variety of its contributions.—The Empire, Toronto.

Highly Successful.

Toronto is at last favoured with a magazine which promises to be highly successful. The UNIVERSITY QUARTERLY REVIEW is published under the auspices of prominent college men, and the first number is most creditable to all connected with it. We wish the new venture every success.—Morning Chronicle, Quebec.

Worthy of its Subscription.

The QUARTERLY is worthy of the subscription ($2.00 a year) of every thoughtful and reading Canadian.—The World, Toronto.
