ADVERTISING AS A BUSINESS FORCE.

The greatest single business force in existence to-day is advertising. Most breeders and many farmers can utilize that force to varying degrees. The breeder should aim first and foremost to produce first-class stock, and next to make that fact known as widely as possible, to the end that he may create a demand for his output that will enable him to secure profitable prices. Take two animals of equal quality and merit one from a widely-known herd or flock and the other the product of an unknown breeder, and everyone knows that the former will bring much the higher price. Advertising creates demand and establishes prestige, and it is the steady hammering away that counts. An advertisement run regularly accumulates force from repetition. Of course, occasional advertisements of special offerings have their use, but the reputation and prestige gained from the regular all-the-year-round ard form the most valuable asset of many a successful breeder. Nearly everyone has occasion to advertise some times. Perhaps you may wish to find a buver or renter for your farm, or, vice versa, may yourself wish to purchase of lease, buy or sell cattle, hay, or what ever it may be. The columns of your paper afford you the opportunity to make your wants known to many thousands of readers at a ridiculously ow cost when it is considered that in no other way could you possibly accomplish the same object except at a vastly greater expenditure of cash, time and trouble. Notwithstanding, some people have queer ideas concerning value of advertising space. For instance, some time ago a reader wrote that he intended to hold an auction sale and enclosed a long advertisement, which he requested in serted in a quarter-page space "as many imes as $1 would now for " stating that his county paper had given him all the space he needed for that price (perhaps his local editor was unusually hard up that day). As soon as we recovered from we wrote him that the de the shock, sired space for one issue would cost him $23.52, which closed the correspondence Probably it never entered his head that a country weekly of perhaps 250 circulation and a paper of 35,000 circulation were entirely different propositions as re gards price at which space could be sold. Another would-be advertiser recently sent us a card. Which in smallest possible space would cost $2.10 for one insertion and instructed us to run it "45 cents worth." Advertising that costs little or

Advertising rates in all papers are pased upon the "agate line," which simply means 1-14 of an inch, regardless how many lines of printing the advertisement may actually contain, or the size of type used. The "agate line" is taken as basis simply for convenience fourteen lines of the "agate" size of type making one inch. Therefore, if a paper's advertising rate is 15 cents per tisement will cost $2.10 -- [Live-stock Re-
