Land Grant for University.

When the Scott government is in an asking mood why does it not ask the Dominion government for a grant of land for university purposes? It would be beneficial to have the provincial government administer the school lands fund...

In 1885 Manitoba received a grant of 150,000 acres for university purposes. What Manitoba received in 1885, Saskatchewan should receive in 1909. The legislation in the Manitoba case, which is contained in the Statutes of Canada 48-49 Victoria...

A Change of Front.

Now that the provincial government is asking that the control of the school lands fund should be handed over to it because it is so much more capable of discharging the work of administration—it is interesting to go over a few of the speeches made by Liberal members of Parliament in 1905. At that time they were positive that it would be better to leave the administration of the public lands in the hands of the Dominion government...

"Now I would not allow for a moment that the people of the North-West Territories are not as well able to look after their own affairs as any other people in the Dominion. But there is this fact that we must all acknowledge—that in the past the different railway companies have managed to get bonuses and guarantees out of practically every province in the Dominion."

"We know what British Columbia has done in giving away large tracts of lands and coal and timber bonuses to railways. We know what the lower provinces and Quebec and Ontario have given in cash or guarantees."

"So these provinces are starting out with everything in their favour and I wish to say here that the governments, as conducted in the Northwest Territories for many years past by Mr. Hautain, has been in every respect a good and satisfactory government for the Northwest Territories. And I have no doubt that whoever may be called upon to carry on the government in the new provinces will carry it on in the same manner, but not owning their lands they will not have the same temptation and they will not have the magnates after them every day trying to get bonuses and guarantees as would be the case if the provinces were the owners of the public lands."

One might infer from these words that the chief reason why the provinces were not given the lands was that they might not be led into temptation. However that might be, this much is sure; the provincial governments have not been delivered from evil. Strange that the opinions of the Liberals on the lands question should so change within three years.

Press Comment.

(Hamilton Spectator.) As a matter of fact, the decline of the liquor habit among the people of the United States, Canada, and Great Britain is due principally to the fact that it is its very nature to destroy itself, if given half an opportunity. Business intelligence in the twentieth century in all of the countries named has said that the man who is addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors is a man who cannot with safety be trusted in positions of business responsibility.

(Toronto News.) The Conservative party should be active also in the great work of conserving the natural resources of the country. Nowhere else is there greater need for zeal, courage and intelligence. It is important both to resist retaliatory legislation at Washington designed to secure Canadian raw material for American factories, and to expose schemers and exploiters at home who so far from their party connections. Our natural wealth should be our chief resource against excessive taxation and dependence upon other countries in the future, and, if it is not conserved and protected, we rob this and all succeeding generations.

(Moose Jaw News.) To say that the request for the administration of the school lands is altogether different from the issue involved for the administration of the public lands in general is to draw a distinction without a difference. Mr. Hautain's request was for the administration of the whole of the public domain, including agricultural, timber and mineral areas. The whole of the public lands necessarily includes the school lands. To say that the autonomy terms have nothing to do with the school lands is aside from the point. The case for the retention of the public lands by the Dominion government is the national interest, and that the Dominion government was more capable than the provincial government to administer these lands; and that the cash subsidy yielded a better return to the province than would the revenue from the lands themselves. Now the argument for the administration of the school lands by the provinces rests upon this: the provinces are equally as capable of administering the school lands as is the Dominion government, and they could derive a larger return from the lands than they do at present.

(The Telegram.) It is refreshing to learn from the delegates who have returned from the canvass of the eastern provinces that the sentiment there is in favor of the Winnipeg centennial. Most of the provinces it appears will furnish an exhibit which assures their practical interest in the project. A world's fair cannot, however, be financed with exhibits. It remains for the Dominion government to say whether the necessary cash accompaniment is to be provided or not. While it is inconceivable that Ottawa will fail to furnish the amount that has been asked for, it is difficult to understand the pretexts that have been used for delaying a decision. The political purposes, and in Quebec at this moment there is dissatisfaction because Sir Louis Jetté, the father-in-law of Minister Lemaire, has been appointed Chief Justice, with the result that at the end of fifteen months he will be entitled to an addition of $1,000 to his pension, whereas another member of the family will take the vacant place. Highly objectionable is the system under which the bench is organized, and action must certainly be taken with a view to bringing about reform.

the existing courts expired when the Appeal Court was called into being. No appeals can therefore be entered, and appeals that ought to be heard are at a standstill. Business men who have cases to be decided are suffering heavy loss of both money and time owing to the delay in clearing the courts.

Mr. Aylesworth, the minister of Justice, pleads as an excuse for the failure to constitute the court the fact that he has been out of the country for some months, and has but recently returned. This would be a valid explanation, if the duties of the department ceased whenever the minister stepped on board ship. But such is not the situation. Another minister takes up the business of the actual minister when the latter is absent, and the work goes on as usual. In the present case, Sir Wilfrid Laurier was at the head of the justice department, and surely he could have made the appointments had he so desired. It happens however, that the theory that the minister of justice selects and appoints judges is a fiction. The choice is really made by the dominant politician in the province in which the judges are to administer the law. If the truth were known the person responsible for the present situation is Minister Templeman. This member of the government dispenses the patronage, and is required by his leader to do so. It is that he will contribute to the welfare of the party. It is not at all improbable that Mr. Templeman is continuing the vacancies on the bench in order that the aspirants or the appointees who have already been designated may first serve the Ottawa politicians in their campaign against Premier McBride. By the Ottawa Ministers, Mr. McBride, who has frustrated several raids upon the province in behalf of federal politicians, is cordially hated, and this is not the first time that the bench has been used in the struggle against him. In the provincial election, the Laurier government took a politician from the bench to help contest the province in its behalf, and gave him as an associate W. W. B. McInnis, the then governor of the Yukon. Judge Henderson did the work required of him, and was then rewarded with a judgeship, while McInnis became a judge. Thus seats on the bench are traded in a political way. In the present instance it is evident that the four judicial offices are kept vacant in order that the persons who are to be appointed may first serve the ruling politicians at Ottawa by fighting against the provincial administration.

The political and personal use of judgeships is becoming too common. In Ontario a position on the bench of the High Court remained unfilled from February to October, a great injury to the public, solely for political purposes, and in Quebec at this moment there is dissatisfaction because Sir Louis Jetté, the father-in-law of Minister Lemaire, has been appointed Chief Justice, with the result that at the end of fifteen months he will be entitled to an addition of $1,000 to his pension, whereas another member of the family will take the vacant place. Highly objectionable is the system under which the bench is organized, and action must certainly be taken with a view to bringing about reform.

PEOPLE AND WEALTH. J. A. Potvin, immigration inspector, was up from Portia today for the first time this season. Since the recent change in the immigration laws Mr. Potvin does not meet the immigrants at the boundary, but goes south into Dakota to meet the trains and make his inspection before the immigrants reach the Canadian line. He says that under this system he is much better able to stop the entrance of undesirable. Under his instructions, he is careful to exclude from Canada all immigrants from Southern Europe, except those who are in every way qualified for farming. After excluding every questionable character, Mr. Potvin says that he is delivering an enormous number of good settlers across the line. From April 1 till the end of October, he passed 17,880 actual settlers. With them came 1,700 cartloads of settlers' effects, representing a large amount of capital. Besides the wealth in stock, the incoming throng is well supplied with hard cash. Nearly all the young men coming to spend the winter on their homesteads, bring at least $100 with them, but among the older ones the cash amount brought in runs well up in the thousands. Many having in their possession from twenty-five to forty thousand in cash. Mr. Potvin says that the class of immigrants coming in this year is far and away better than in former seasons.—Estevan Mercury.

Alarmed at the depopulation of the country Swedish business men are making strenuous efforts to prevent immigration. They recommend that the government divide its holdings into small farms and to people these with thrifty workers.
