Been Prompted by Remorse.

A Los Angeles, Cal., despatch says: One of the greatest mystories of this city has been that of the tongueless han, which has just been solved. Last November a priestly-looking man hired a room at the ledging-house at the corner of Fifth and Broadway. One morning he was found in his room, blood issuing from his mouth, and a blocky razor in his hand. On examination it was found that he had cut out his tongue with the razor. Bloody tracks to the door, out in the hall and the bath-room indicated that he had been there. Search showed that he had throw his tongue down a drain pipe. in the hall and the bath-room indicated that he had been there. Search showed that he had thrown his tongue down a drain pipe. After his wound healed he disappeared. He was thought to have been a Catholic priest. It now turns out that his name is George Wilson. He goes garbed as a priest, but he is a professional gambler. His family is wealthy and live in Now York. His father has just died and left an estate of $150,000, $50,000 of which was left to him. The state cannot be settled up until George has been found, and detectives from New York are now in the city looking for him. They state that George has been the black sheep of the family. This statement suggests that the man's act of outting out his tongue was prompted by remorge.

C., a lamp used in the entertainment was accidentally upset and broken. The oil ignited at once, and in an instant the place caught fire. A panic ensued among the large number of children present, and a mad runh was made for the door. The greatest excitement prevailed, and the screams and shouts of the terrified children, as they desperately fought to escape from the place, were heartrending. A number were knocked down and trampled upon, but with the aid of the few adults who were present at the performance, and a number of persons who had been attracted to the spot by the shouting of the children, all were got out of the building. Twenty little ones were more or less injured, and fears are entertained that two of them will die from the terrible bruising and crushing that they received.

Insomnia Dreve Him to Insmity and Sulcide.

A London cable-says: At an inquest held yesterday on the body of Dr. Howard Arnold, a nephow of the late Matthew Arnold, the jury returned a verdict of suicide while under temporary derangement. The following letter from the deceased man to his wife was read:

"My darling, how I love you. In my despair after these three months of insomnia and terrible depression, I feel that death is preferable to insanity. Ask Robert to look after Allyne; he will, I know. It is better for you that I go now than to remain a drain upon you. How happy life has been with you; what an angel you have been to me, yet this curse has killed me. My last thought was of you, my darling. Forgive me, sweetheart; forgive me, it is for the best. Dear love, dear love, Howard."

To Buplicate the Tunnel.

A Port Huron despatch says: The St. Clair Tunnel Company has purchased considerable land immediately adjacent to the site of the present international tunnel, and, it is said, will begin operations for the construction of another tunnel inside of sixty days. The contemplated underground passage will be similar to the present one, without the deep excavations at either of the approaches. It is plainly evident that the boring can be more rapidly accomplished and with less expenditure of money than has marked their previous undertaking. The new tunnel will be used for the westward traffic, while the old will be utilized for castward business. It is anticipated that the new passage, will be completed inside of twelve months. The new tunnel will be located 150 feet north of the present one.

Very dismal reports continue to arrive of the effect of the death of the Duke of Clarsness upon the London theatrical season. It is the absence of the fashionable world from the high-priced crohestra-stalls that is peculiarly felt. A fortnight-lage no fewer than eight theatres were closed.

A leaded bomb wis discovered on Thursday night outside the Spanish consulate in Messims, Sicily. The fuse attached to it was burning, but was quickly extinguished, with remarkable presence of, mind and course, by the finders. The police were alarmed and immediately began a search for the dynamiters, but no arrests have yet been made. The men are supposed to be members of an Anarchist society acting in sympathy with the Anarchists in Spain.

The victim, a stranger and unknown man, was set upon in a village tavern at the dead of night by a lot of lawless and drunken ruffians and murdered in cold blood. Then to hide their orime the murderers cremated the remains. The whole story seems improbable, were it not that it is youched for by good authority. About eight miles out from this place is the village of Loretto. Loretto, like most country villages, is situated at cross-roads and is composed largely of a tavern and a store. The tavern is run by Mrs. Gamble. The tavern air nu by Mrs. Gamble. The tavern adjoins a store, and does a thriving trade for so small a place. The aurrounding country is given up to farming, but a number of undesirable characters infest the section. Law is an unknown quantity to many of the latter, and might is right with them. Rows and brutal assaults are not uncommon, and murders have been committed in the locality on several occasions.

A Galt Man Fatally Ricked in the Breast by a Morse.

A Galt despatch says: William Huntzberger, aged about 27 years, employed on the farm of Mr. J. C. Dietrich, on the Blair road near Galt, was found about half-past 6 c'clock this evening lying on the floor of the stable in an apparently dying condition. James John, another of Mr. Dietrich's employees, was the first to discover the unfortunate man, and at once went for assistance. Doctors Vardon and Sylvester were soon on the spot, but death had come prior to their arrival. Upon examination it was found that Huntzberger's ribs were crushed in over the heart by a kick from a horse. Huntzberger had been working the horses during the day, and was alone engaged in fixing them in the stable for the night when the accident took place. The deceased was a married man of very steady habits. A widow and two children survive him.

THE WAR COMING.

The Shippers' Federation to Fight the Organized Labor Unions.

A London cable says: A committee of the Shipping Federation, which aims to break up the seamen's and other allied unions, is on the point of completing a gigantic long-projected scheme for the absorption of all the industries connected with the shipping. The committee's overtures have met with marked success. They have found that numerous employers of labor in different branches of the shipping industry are anxious to be rid of the present isksome conditions, owing to which they find themselves greatly under the men's thumbs. It is tacitly understood that when the details of the desired co-operation are finally settled the Shipping Federation will throw off the mask and declare a war which will decide the question of supremacy between the unions and the employers.

Decrease in Crime. The report on the common jails, prisons, and reformatories, presented to the Ontario Legislature, announces that during the past year there was a decrease in crime, the number of committals being 1,387 less than last year. Of this number there was a decrease of 1,153 adult males and 176 females. The number of boys under 12 years was 40 less; girls under the same age, 18 less. Total committals 10,423, as against 11,810 in 1890. The most notable decrease is in Toronto, the number of committals during the year being 3,371, as against 3,984 in 1890, or 615 less.

STARTED THE ENGINE UP. Conductor Lassa and one of the switchmen procured a shotgun, freed the engine of the express, and with the fireman and engineer started in pursuit of the fugitive. It will be remembered that the Central Hudson is started in pursuit of the fugitive. It will be remembered that the Central Hudson is a four-tracked road, and the two engines, though both going west, were not on the same track. The express engine soon overtook the robber, who suddenly reversed his engine and let his pursuers pass him, pouring a perfect bail of pistol bullets into the cab as his pursuers went by. Then the pursuers stopped and the pursued went ahead.

About two miles beyond the robber found his engine's steam was giving out, so he jumped off at a cross road and started across the country, going south. He managed to terrorize a farmer into letting him have a horse, and rode on about two miles further south. Here he procured a horse and cutter, persuading the owner, a German farmer, to entrusthim with them by firing on him.

The party on the express engine had returned to Lyons, where the sheriff of Wayne county had organized a posse, which, under command of Deputy Sheriff Collins, had started in pursuit. The story of the attempt at robbery, as far as can be gathered, is this: The express measenger, be it understood, will not talk. Cross boarded the train when it pulled out of Syracuse, and climbed on top of the express car. He was provided with a hooked rope. Fastening the hook in the slight cornice of the roof on one side of the car he let himself down on the other, and risting his toes on the ledge that runs around the car he looked in the glass of the side door and saw the express mansger in in front of one of the safes, which was open, making up his bills. He smashed the glass with his revolver, covered the measurger, and shouted to him to holduphis hands. Instead of doing this, McInerney reached for the signal cord with one hand and for his revolver with the other. A bullet smashed the hand on the cord, but not before it had given the signal that aroused the conductor. Then McInerney fired on the robber and put a bullet through his coat. Then the robber shot the messenger twice, once in the right leg and once in the left temple. He climbed into the car, and a desperate struggle took place, which did not end until the train was stopped for the first time near Weedsport. It is evident power of the robber he rolled out some of the least valuable packages and covered valuable ones with them. The robber was impatient to get currency, and threatened to shock if it was not ancrendered. He said to the messenger, "You can't fool me. I've been in this business before." While the robber was waiting to get the money to the train reached Lyons and the game was up. Mra. Mr. Prentise said this morning: "He admitted the whole thing, and told where he had been since the Utica robbery. He said he had been in Cannda, down South and in the West. He said he wrote that letter from Canada and put a United States postage stamp on it, but was told that it would not go with that stamp, and then you a Canadian stamp. He did not go in the direction indicated in the letter. He says that he has always gone under his own name, and was indignant at the statement that he took any other name. He told me he knew when they were after him in any place and avoided arrest by changing his voice and putting on gold spectacles.

THE ESTIMATES.

The estimates of 1892 show a total esti-nated expenditure of $3,472,237. The mounts are classified as follows:

A Belfast cable says: The excitement in Ulster over the Montagu tragedy is increasing. The husband of Mrs. Montagu is a grandson of the Duke of Manchester and a former officer in the navy. Mrs. Montagu, who is of Scotch extraction, is the daughter of a wealthy London tea merchant. She is noted for her daring horsemanship in Ireland. Cromoro, her residence, is one of the finest manisions in the district. Mrs. Montagu has hitherto moved in the best society. When an Associated Press representative called at the residence he found Mr. Montagu engaged with the parish priest, but he consented to an interview. the cheerful and light-hearted way in which he had undertaken the task of presenting the dreary old bill of fare. They were to-day as usual confronted with the usual deficit, and no apology whatever was made for it. They took the usual failure on the part of the Province, it might be of his hon. friend, to be that they were unable to meet the obligations which the Province had been obliged to make from year to year. They had also the usual borrowing of money to meet the obligations, and they had the usual old paper surplus presented to them to-day. Mr. Harcourt—The bonds mature in 1893. A year ago they would be sold at $210,000, but as the date of their maturity approaches they consequently depreciate in value. We say that if sold now they would bring $205,000.

Mr. Clancy then contended that these bonds were in reality only worth their par value. Continuing, he said that sums owing by the Dominion should not be capitalized to show a surplus any more than the Crownlands and the timber limits and other resources should be capitalized. If the imaginary amount held by the Dominion were subtracted from the surplus the actual surplus would be found to be $729,150, with the sum of $19,000 the surplus of the year, which was the smallest annual surplus in the history of the Province.

Mr. Mowat moved that the debate be adjourned till Tuesday. Carried.

THE MONTAGU FAMILY. We steamed around the dazing min he hope of seeing a boat containing the crew. Then we steamed to leeward for 12 miles, but no sign of boat or raft could be discovered. We laid around as long as possible, but no boat could live in such a sea as was running at that time.

"When we reached Gravesend the scratch crew was immediately discharged. Capt. Irwin went to the London agents of the owners of the Loodiaus, which was then reported to be missing. The burning vessel was of American build, and the description of our captain seemed to leave no doubt that it was the Loodians which we had seen. He learned that the captain had his wife on board. We saw the vessel in lat. 48, lon. 42, about 1,200 miles west-south-west of Queenstown." in lat. 48, lon. 42, about 1,200 miles westsouth-west of Queenstown."

The Loodiana was built in Nova Scotia and had carried cargoes of petroleum for some years. She was insured at Windsor, N. S., for $40,000. Capt. Boyd was in command. Being a sailing vessel, the Loodiana had been delayed on the Atlantic coast by the severe gales of January.

End of an Old Feud.

End of an Old Fend.

A Frankfort, Mich., despatch says: Chas. Sutherland, of this place, known better among marine men as. "Capt. Charley," was shot through the brain on Saturday night by E. B. Stranble, an old feud being the direct cause. There are now under arrest as being implicated Mrs. Stranble, wife of the alleged murderer, Chas. Wegner, jun., and A. A. Smith. Stranble, who is a sloon keeper, was being tantalized by some boys rapping on his window, and, rushing out and encountering Sutherland, abused him, thinking he was doing the rapping. Sutherland slapped his face, and in return received the fatal shot.

Ulter- over the Montagu tragody is increasing. The husband of Mrs. Montagu is a grandson of the Duke of Manchester and a former officer in the navy. Mrs. Montagu, who is of Scotch extraction, is the daughter of a wealthy London tes merchant. She is noted for her daring horsemanship in Ireland. Cromoro, her residence, is one of the finest manions in the district. Mrs. Montagu has hitherto moved in the best society. When an Associated Press representative called at the residence he found Mr. Montagu engaged with the parish priest, but he consented to an interview. Being asked how it was that such severe punishment was edministered to a 3-year-old child, Mr. Montagu said: "My wife has strong opinians on the training and correction of children."
