HOUSEKEEPING

Stains on knives are very unsightly, and can be taken out by taking a piece of raw potato, dipping it into brick dust, and then scouring the spots.

To take mudstains off silk, wipe carefully with a little ammonia and water. If the silk is of a bright color, use chloroform to erase the mud stains.

To remove stains from velvet wet a piece of rag with a little benzine and lightly touch the spots with it, then wipe with a clean rag. Hold the back of the velvet over boiling water, then over an iron to raise the pile again.

Bruises—Should the eye, forehead, or any part of the body be bruised or blackened by a fall or blow, immediately apply to the injured part a cloth wrung out of very hot water. Change it constantly until the pain has subsided. The moist heat liquefies the blood, which has been brought near the surface by the blow and makes it circulate again in its proper channel.

ULCERS FOR 35 YEARS

Eleven on One Limb at One Time With Excoriating Pain. All Remedies Tried, and Numberless Physicians Little Benefit. CUTICURA Speedily Cures.

My mother has been a victim to ulcers for thirty-five years. Eleven of these terrible sores have existed at one time on the limb affected. The excruciating pain and intense suffering were endured, with all sorts of remedies on trial and numberless physicians' calls and prescriptions applied, but all practically without result. However, at last the remedial agent was found in CUTICURA (ointment), which surely proved its weight in gold, alleviating pain and causing healing processes to commence and a cure speedily effected. She has, also, used CUTICURA with marked benefit in erysipelas of the face and neck. The CUTICURA Soap, also, has established a record only as the best cleansing, purifying, and healing in its nature, having proved itself a most excellent and valuable auxiliary to the CUTICURA (ointment). I would remark that this testimonial is entirely unqualified, being a voluntary contribution for the relief of the afflicted. The CUTICURA REMEDIES to the fullest confidence, being satisfied of their purity, genuineness, and almost magical power. W. T. MORSE, Cabot, Va. March 15, 1898.

Thus are speedily, permanently cured all sorts of skin diseases, including the burning humors of the scalp, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair, when either CUTICURA Soap, or CUTICURA (ointment) is used.

WOMEN WHO WEAR WELL.

It is astonishing how great a change a few years of married life will make in the appearance of many women.

The freshness, the charm, the brilliancy, which is the bloom from a woman's face, which is rudely handled.

The matron is only a dim shadow, a faint echo of the charming maiden. There are two reasons for this change, ignorance and neglect. Few young women appreciate the shock to the system through the change which comes with marriage. Many neglect to deal with the unpleasant drain which is often consequent on marriage and motherhood, not understanding that this secret drain is robbing the cheek of its freshness and the form of its firmness.

As surely as the general health suffers when there is derangement of the health of the delicate, womanly organs, so surely will the face and form at once witness to the fact in renewed comeliness. Half a million women and more have found health and happiness in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

No human being can come into this world without increasing or diminishing the sum total of human happiness.—Edith Barrett.

THE DANGER OF BEAUTY

The dreadful suffering, physically and mentally experienced by Women.

Beauty—when applied, at any rate, to persons by the pen of the novelist, the dramatist and the historian—seems to be a vastly dangerous biding, and instead of bringing in its trend that superb joy voiced by the deities, it carries with it a burden which is indeed a very hard lot to bear.

Pick up any novel at random and you will read that the only persecuted creature in it, to speak by her card, is the beautiful young heroine. It is her beauty which has attracted the villain, like the bright flame which attracts the moth, and made him act as a brute to her.

Beauty in novels, freely interpreted, means dreadful suffering, physical and mental; it means a deadly poison which is as fatal as the sting of a viper and which permeates the body and soul of the average heroine of the modern novel. It brings no joy except at the end of the book.

The penalty for being beautiful would seem to be more exacting and more disagreeable than the disappointments experienced by the ugly. It is because the modern heroine of books, or of the stage, is described as a sort of daughter of the gods in form and build and looks that you take interest in her and follow her doings, her sufferings, through every page of a novel or through every scene and act of a play.

Leave fiction for fact. Scour the village of the United States from Maine to California and you will find, with very few exceptions, that nearly all can tell the story of how once upon a time there lived in the village a beautiful girl who fell a slave to the mad delirium of love and after many years came back a wreck. There is recorded in the unwritten archives of nearly every village such a story as that told in one form or another.

But this is not the story of a village merely; it is the history of the world. It was this evil fate of beauty that wrecked Cleopatra, who in turn wrecked Marc Antony, broke the heart of Octavia and brought the horrors of civil war upon imperial Rome. The great Julius fell a victim to her exquisite charms at a single interview.

Cleopatra was a beautiful and magnificent creature, and her charms never failed to captivate and conquer those who passed before her. She was not only all this, but her personal beauty seemed to have influenced her mind intellectually in a marked degree. She was a woman of very high attainments. She was as intelligent as she was beautiful. She was a capital musician, skilled in several languages, a good singer and a brilliant conversationalist. No woman has surpassed her in cunning.

How she died is a mystery. The story of the asp biting her to death is a myth, but authorities agree that she died a violent death by her own hand—a hard price for such great beauty as hers.

There is the pitiful story of Julia Deane, who, in her maiden days, poor, humble girl was, on account of her great personal charms, raised from a common sphere to the highest that imperial Rome could offer. She became the wife of Severus, and thus Empress of Rome. Her beauty was her evil fate. She lent herself to the flattery of courtiers, permitted all and sundry to approach her with their sentiments; finally, she fell back into the position she came from, but not before she had been stained in the arm by a son, who intended the blow, however, for his brother.

Disappointed of all hope of ever becoming again the power she once was in Rome, deserted by those who brought her to her misery, forsaken by her friends, she ended her days in starvation.

There was yet another beautiful Roman Julia, who, through her extreme beauty, was introduced to and became the wife of a famous Senator when she was only a child. Between that tender age and four-and-twenty she lived up to the traditions of the times, fell a victim to the conceit of her own charms, became the prey of flatterers, conspired against her husband, and was finally put to a violent death.

The story of the captivating Helen of Troy is interesting, and is on a par with that of the beautiful women just alluded to. Helen of Troy was tied to a tree and strangled—a condign punishment for the errors she fell into on account of her beauty. She was responsible for the many years' siege of Troy, her husband, Menelaus, being determined to revenge himself on Paris. It serves as an object lesson for those women who repine because they are not beautiful.

Josephine, the unfortunate wife of Napoleon I., was said by her husband to be the most truly lovely woman, refined, affable, charming; a goddess of the toilet, kind and humane, yet because no son was born to them Napoleon divorced her—an overwhelming sorrow. She died an absolutely crushed and saddened woman.

Why, then, are Heroic Jims, "Why is it," the girl asked, "that the brave boys who are not appreciated at home—who are regarded as black sheep by the rest of the family, and go to war where they fall while carrying the beloved flag of our country up the rocky slopes—why is it that these noble fellows are always named Jim? I have read a hundred poems about them during the last year or two and every one of them was Jim. Is it merely a coincidence, or can there be something in a name after all?"

"It is not a coincidence," the cynic beside her answered. "It's the name that makes them heroic. Juliet said a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but Jim by any other name would not be so popular. The poems written about him, just think of the poetical language presented by him, Jim, Jim, Jim, Jim, Jim, dim, whim, glim, rim, him, not to mention cherubim, seraphim and a lot more long words that could be used in a poem. Jim is one of the boys that have glory thrust upon them."—Chicago Times-Herald.
