

THE ACADIAN

AND KING'S CO. TIMES.

HONEST, INDEPENDENT, FEARLESS...DEVOTED TO LOCAL AND GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

WOLFVILLE, KING'S CO., N. S., FRIDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1889.

No. 18.

Vol. IX.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that it is recommended by the most eminent medical authorities."—Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
11 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
THE CHRYSLER COMPANY, 77 Murray Street, N. Y.

THE ACADIAN.

Published on FRIDAY at the office
WOLFVILLE, KING'S CO., N. S.

TERMS:
$1.00 Per Annum.
(IN ADVANCE.)

CLUBS of five in advance $4.00.

Local advertising at ten cents per line for every insertion, unless by special arrangement for standing advertisements will be made known on application to the office, and payment in advance is required.

The ACADIAN JOB DEPARTMENT is complete, and ready to receive new type and material, and will continue to guarantee satisfaction on all work turned out.

New communications from all parts of the county, or articles upon the topics of the day are cordially solicited. The name of the party writing for the ACADIAN should be given, and the name of the article should be written in a legible hand.

Address all communications to
DAVISON BROS.,
Editors & Proprietors,
Wolfville, N. S.

DIRECTORY

—OF THE—
Business Firms of WOLFVILLE

The undermentioned firms will use you right, and we can safely recommend them as our most enterprising business men.

DISHOP, JOHNSON H.—Dealer in Flour, Feed of all kinds, &c.

BORDEN, C. H.—Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, and Gents' Furnishing Goods.

BORDEN, CHARLES H.—Carriages and Sleighs Built, Repaired, and Painted.

BLACKADDER, W. C.—Cabinet Maker and Repairer.

ROW N, J. L.—Practical Horse-Shoer and Farrier.

CALDWELL & MURRAY.—Dry Goods, Boots & Shoes, Furniture, etc.

DAVISON, J. B.—Justice of the Peace, Conveyancer, Fire Insurance Agent.

DAVISON BROS.—Printers and Publishers.

DR PAYZANT & SON, Dentists.

GILMORE, G. H.—Insurance Agent, Agent of Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association, of New York.

GODFREY, L. P.—Manufacturer of Boots and Shoes.

HAMILTON, MISS S. A.—Milliner and dealer in fashionable millinery goods.

HARRIS, O. D.—General Dry Goods, Clothing and Gents' Furnishings.

HERBIN, J. F.—Watch Maker and Jeweller.

HIGGINS, W. J.—General Coal Dealer. Coal always on hand.

KELLEY, THOMAS.—Boot and Shoe Maker. All orders in his line faithfully performed. Repairing neatly done.

MURPHY, J. L.—Cabinet Maker and Repairer.

PATRIQUIN, C. A.—Manufacturer of all kinds of Carriage, and Team Harness. Opposite People's Bank.

ROCKWELL & CO.—Book-sellers, Stationers, Picture Framers, and dealers in Pianos, Organs, and Sewing Machines.

RAND, G. V.—Drugs, and Fancy Goods.

SLEEP, S. R.—Importer and dealer in General Hardware, Stoves, and Tinware. Agents for Frost & Wood's Pews.

SHAW, J. M.—Barber and Tobacconist.

WALLACE, G. H.—Wholesale and Retail Grocer.

WITTER, BURPEE.—Importer and dealer in Dry Goods, Millinery, Ready-made Clothing, and Gents' Furnishings.

WILSON, JAS.—Harness Maker, is still in Wolfville where he is prepared to fill all orders in his line of business.

J. B. DAVISON, J. P.
STIPENDIARY MAGISTRATE,
CONVEYANCER,
INSURANCE AGENT, ETC.
WOLFVILLE, N. S.

JOHN W. WALLACE,
BARRISTER-AT-LAW,
NOTARY, CONVEYANCER, ETC.
Also General Agent for FIRE and LIFE INSURANCE.
WOLFVILLE N. S.

Watches, Clocks, and Jewelry
REPAIRED!

—BY—
J. F. HERBIN,
Next door to Post Office.
Small articles SILVERPLATED.

POETRY.

of the night after supper, so as to have plenty of time. If we started out, we were going to do it thoroughly. We weren't going to have any half-way work.

Supper-time came, and Lew was on the spot, all muffled up. He had a big comforter round his neck and a couple of pairs of mittens on and a pair of moccasins on his feet. Seeing it was cold, I followed his example and bundled up too. I borrowed Henry's mittens to put on over mine and asked dad for his to put on over them again. But dad said he guessed two pairs would be warm enough, and wanted to know where I was going anyway.

That was an unfortunate thing to ask. I was sorry I asked him for the mittens. I'd have rather gone without them. I hated to lie to him and tell him we were going somewhere where we weren't. I always hate to lie anyway when there's any other way of getting out of it. I remembered all the stories I'd heard about George Washington and for a minute I'd half a notion to tell him the whole truth. But then I thought how anxious he'd be if we never came back and my conscience smote me. Says I:

"Oh, we're just going down to Brooks's store for a while."

"All right," says he, "I'm going down there in a little while myself."

That'd never do. Says I:

"Grimes's store, I mean."

"All right," says he, "I'm going in there for a while too."

That was more unfortunate than the other. I almost wished I'd have told him the truth and let me conscience smite. I kind of hated to go, because I didn't know but dad might object to me going. This was such a boss night for ghost-hunting that I didn't want to run any risks. I was in a nice mess. I didn't know what to do. I suppose I could have kept on and lied out of it, but I didn't feel like lying altogether. Besides I didn't know where to strike in next. Like as not if I said we were going out to old Josh Jenkins's to a candy pull he'd say he had a bid out too, and would want us to wait for him. I concluded I wasn't going to lie, so I just didn't say anything and left.

It was considerably cold out, to tell the truth—that is, kind of keen. I was glad I'd bundled up as I did. We strolled forth at a rapid rate. The wind was in our back and it hurried us along at a pretty good jog. This would be at our disadvantage coming back though, we reckoned. We hoped the goodness that the ghost wouldn't chase us far.

As we got out a little beyond old Josh Jenkins's the road was drifted pretty bad. We hadn't thought of that. It would be pretty tough running from ghosts through snow-drifts of this size and the wind in your face. The further we got the worse it seemed to get. It looked kind of discouraging, I assure you. But we strove on. We weren't going to be baffled. We were going to carry out our project or it would be a caution. But the snow seemed to be getting deeper and deeper all the time. As we got out in sight of the Holler such a sight of snow you never saw. It was astonishing to say the least.

"Wall, says Lew, 'what do you think uv the scene?' when we got pretty near there."

I stopped and viewed the prospect as it lay out before us in rapid succession.

"Well," says I, "we've set out to do it; we've got to carry it out now, I suppose, if the snow is over our heads. I'm not one to back out of it."

"But s'posin' ther' ghost gits ter chasin' us," says Lew, "how'll we git over this snow? Seems ter me we'd stand a mighty poor chance, in case uv emergencies. Ghosts, you know, kin git over snow mighty quick."

I never thought of that. There was a considerable plausibleness in his argument.

"That's a fact," says I,—"that's very true. But if we can't do anything else, there's plenty of trees around the Holler and we can climb them."

So we advanced a little further. We turned neither to the left hand nor to the right, but kept on—me of the night after supper, so as to have plenty of time. If we started out, we were going to do it thoroughly. We weren't going to have any half-way work.

SERIAL.

Supper-time came, and Lew was on the spot, all muffled up. He had a big comforter round his neck and a couple of pairs of mittens on and a pair of moccasins on his feet. Seeing it was cold, I followed his example and bundled up too. I borrowed Henry's mittens to put on over mine and asked dad for his to put on over them again. But dad said he guessed two pairs would be warm enough, and wanted to know where I was going anyway.

That was an unfortunate thing to ask. I was sorry I asked him for the mittens. I'd have rather gone without them. I hated to lie to him and tell him we were going somewhere where we weren't. I always hate to lie anyway when there's any other way of getting out of it. I remembered all the stories I'd heard about George Washington and for a minute I'd half a notion to tell him the whole truth. But then I thought how anxious he'd be if we never came back and my conscience smote me. Says I:

"Oh, we're just going down to Brooks's store for a while."

"All right," says he, "I'm going down there in a little while myself."

That'd never do. Says I:

"Grimes's store, I mean."

"All right," says he, "I'm going in there for a while too."

That was more unfortunate than the other. I almost wished I'd have told him the truth and let me conscience smite. I kind of hated to go, because I didn't know but dad might object to me going. This was such a boss night for ghost-hunting that I didn't want to run any risks. I was in a nice mess. I didn't know what to do. I suppose I could have kept on and lied out of it, but I didn't feel like lying altogether. Besides I didn't know where to strike in next. Like as not if I said we were going out to old Josh Jenkins's to a candy pull he'd say he had a bid out too, and would want us to wait for him. I concluded I wasn't going to lie, so I just didn't say anything and left.

It was considerably cold out, to tell the truth—that is, kind of keen. I was glad I'd bundled up as I did. We strolled forth at a rapid rate. The wind was in our back and it hurried us along at a pretty good jog. This would be at our disadvantage coming back though, we reckoned. We hoped the goodness that the ghost wouldn't chase us far.

As we got out a little beyond old Josh Jenkins's the road was drifted pretty bad. We hadn't thought of that. It would be pretty tough running from ghosts through snow-drifts of this size and the wind in your face. The further we got the worse it seemed to get. It looked kind of discouraging, I assure you. But we strove on. We weren't going to be baffled. We were going to carry out our project or it would be a caution. But the snow seemed to be getting deeper and deeper all the time. As we got out in sight of the Holler such a sight of snow you never saw. It was astonishing to say the least.

"Wall, says Lew, 'what do you think uv the scene?' when we got pretty near there."

I stopped and viewed the prospect as it lay out before us in rapid succession.

"Well," says I, "we've set out to do it; we've got to carry it out now, I suppose, if the snow is over our heads. I'm not one to back out of it."

"But s'posin' ther' ghost gits ter chasin' us," says Lew, "how'll we git over this snow? Seems ter me we'd stand a mighty poor chance, in case uv emergencies. Ghosts, you know, kin git over snow mighty quick."

I never thought of that. There was a considerable plausibleness in his argument.

"That's a fact," says I,—"that's very true. But if we can't do anything else, there's plenty of trees around the Holler and we can climb them."

So we advanced a little further. We turned neither to the left hand nor to the right, but kept on—me of the night after supper, so as to have plenty of time. If we started out, we were going to do it thoroughly. We weren't going to have any half-way work.

CHAPTER VI.—Continued.

Supper-time came, and Lew was on the spot, all muffled up. He had a big comforter round his neck and a couple of pairs of mittens on and a pair of moccasins on his feet. Seeing it was cold, I followed his example and bundled up too. I borrowed Henry's mittens to put on over mine and asked dad for his to put on over them again. But dad said he guessed two pairs would be warm enough, and wanted to know where I was going anyway.

That was an unfortunate thing to ask. I was sorry I asked him for the mittens. I'd have rather gone without them. I hated to lie to him and tell him we were going somewhere where we weren't. I always hate to lie anyway when there's any other way of getting out of it. I remembered all the stories I'd heard about George Washington and for a minute I'd half a notion to tell him the whole truth. But then I thought how anxious he'd be if we never came back and my conscience smote me. Says I:

"Oh, we're just going down to Brooks's store for a while."

"All right," says he, "I'm going down there in a little while myself."

That'd never do. Says I:

"Grimes's store, I mean."

"All right," says he, "I'm going in there for a while too."

That was more unfortunate than the other. I almost wished I'd have told him the truth and let me conscience smite. I kind of hated to go, because I didn't know but dad might object to me going. This was such a boss night for ghost-hunting that I didn't want to run any risks. I was in a nice mess. I didn't know what to do. I suppose I could have kept on and lied out of it, but I didn't feel like lying altogether. Besides I didn't know where to strike in next. Like as not if I said we were going out to old Josh Jenkins's to a candy pull he'd say he had a bid out too, and would want us to wait for him. I concluded I wasn't going to lie, so I just didn't say anything and left.

It was considerably cold out, to tell the truth—that is, kind of keen. I was glad I'd bundled up as I did. We strolled forth at a rapid rate. The wind was in our back and it hurried us along at a pretty good jog. This would be at our disadvantage coming back though, we reckoned. We hoped the goodness that the ghost wouldn't chase us far.

As we got out a little beyond old Josh Jenkins's the road was drifted pretty bad. We hadn't thought of that. It would be pretty tough running from ghosts through snow-drifts of this size and the wind in your face. The further we got the worse it seemed to get. It looked kind of discouraging, I assure you. But we strove on. We weren't going to be baffled. We were going to carry out our project or it would be a caution. But the snow seemed to be getting deeper and deeper all the time. As we got out in sight of the Holler such a sight of snow you never saw. It was astonishing to say the least.

"Wall, says Lew, 'what do you think uv the scene?' when we got pretty near there."

I stopped and viewed the prospect as it lay out before us in rapid succession.

"Well," says I, "we've set out to do it; we've got to carry it out now, I suppose, if the snow is over our heads. I'm not one to back out of it."

"But s'posin' ther' ghost gits ter chasin' us," says Lew, "how'll we git over this snow? Seems ter me we'd stand a mighty poor chance, in case uv emergencies. Ghosts, you know, kin git over snow mighty quick."

I never thought of that. There was a considerable plausibleness in his argument.

"That's a fact," says I,—"that's very true. But if we can't do anything else, there's plenty of trees around the Holler and we can climb them."

So we advanced a little further. We turned neither to the left hand nor to the right, but kept on—me of the night after supper, so as to have plenty of time. If we started out, we were going to do it thoroughly. We weren't going to have any half-way work.

CHAPTER VII.

Supper-time came, and Lew was on the spot, all muffled up. He had a big comforter round his neck and a couple of pairs of mittens on and a pair of moccasins on his feet. Seeing it was cold, I followed his example and bundled up too. I borrowed Henry's mittens to put on over mine and asked dad for his to put on over them again. But dad said he guessed two pairs would be warm enough, and wanted to know where I was going anyway.

That was an unfortunate thing to ask. I was sorry I asked him for the mittens. I'd have rather gone without them. I hated to lie to him and tell him we were going somewhere where we weren't. I always hate to lie anyway when there's any other way of getting out of it. I remembered all the stories I'd heard about George Washington and for a minute I'd half a notion to tell him the whole truth. But then I thought how anxious he'd be if we never came back and my conscience smote me. Says I:

"Oh, we're just going down to Brooks's store for a while."

"All right," says he, "I'm going down there in a little while myself."

That'd never do. Says I:

"Grimes's store, I mean."

"All right," says he, "I'm going in there for a while too."

That was more unfortunate than the other. I almost wished I'd have told him the truth and let me conscience smite. I kind of hated to go, because I didn't know but dad might object to me going. This was such a boss night for ghost-hunting that I didn't want to run any risks. I was in a nice mess. I didn't know what to do. I suppose I could have kept on and lied out of it, but I didn't feel like lying altogether. Besides I didn't know where to strike in next. Like as not if I said we were going out to old Josh Jenkins's to a candy pull he'd say he had a bid out too, and would want us to wait for him. I concluded I wasn't going to lie, so I just didn't say anything and left.

It was considerably cold out, to tell the truth—that is, kind of keen. I was glad I'd bundled up as I did. We strolled forth at a rapid rate. The wind was in our back and it hurried us along at a pretty good jog. This would be at our disadvantage coming back though, we reckoned. We hoped the goodness that the ghost wouldn't chase us far.

As we got out a little beyond old Josh Jenkins's the road was drifted pretty bad. We hadn't thought of that. It would be pretty tough running from ghosts through snow-drifts of this size and the wind in your face. The further we got the worse it seemed to get. It looked kind of discouraging, I assure you. But we strove on. We weren't going to be baffled. We were going to carry out our project or it would be a caution. But the snow seemed to be getting deeper and deeper all the time. As we got out in sight of the Holler such a sight of snow you never saw. It was astonishing to say the least.

"Wall, says Lew, 'what do you think uv the scene?' when we got pretty near there."

I stopped and viewed the prospect as it lay out before us in rapid succession.

"Well," says I, "we've set out to do it; we've got to carry it out now, I suppose, if the snow is over our heads. I'm not one to back out of it."

"But s'posin' ther' ghost gits ter chasin' us," says Lew, "how'll we git over this snow? Seems ter me we'd stand a mighty poor chance, in case uv emergencies. Ghosts, you know, kin git over snow mighty quick."

I never thought of that. There was a considerable plausibleness in his argument.

"That's a fact," says I,—"that's very true. But if we can't do anything else, there's plenty of trees around the Holler and we can climb them."

So we advanced a little further. We turned neither to the left hand nor to the right, but kept on—me of the night after supper, so as to have plenty of time. If we started out, we were going to do it thoroughly. We weren't going to have any half-way work.

CHAPTER VIII.

Supper-time came, and Lew was on the spot, all muffled up. He had a big comforter round his neck and a couple of pairs of mittens on and a pair of moccasins on his feet. Seeing it was cold, I followed his example and bundled up too. I borrowed Henry's mittens to put on over mine and asked dad for his to put on over them again. But dad said he guessed two pairs would be warm enough, and wanted to know where I was going anyway.

That was an unfortunate thing to ask. I was sorry I asked him for the mittens. I'd have rather gone without them. I hated to lie to him and tell him we were going somewhere where we weren't. I always hate to lie anyway when there's any other way of getting out of it. I remembered all the stories I'd heard about George Washington and for a minute I'd half a notion to tell him the whole truth. But then I thought how anxious he'd be if we never came back and my conscience smote me. Says I:

"Oh, we're just going down to Brooks's store for a while."

"All right," says he, "I'm going down there in a little while myself."

That'd never do. Says I:

"Grimes's store, I mean."

"All right," says he, "I'm going in there for a while too."

That was more unfortunate than the other. I almost wished I'd have told him the truth and let me conscience smite. I kind of hated to go, because I didn't know but dad might object to me going. This was such a boss night for ghost-hunting that I didn't want to run any risks. I was in a nice mess. I didn't know what to do. I suppose I could have kept on and lied out of it, but I didn't feel like lying altogether. Besides I didn't know where to strike in next. Like as not if I said we were going out to old Josh Jenkins's to a candy pull he'd say he had a bid out too, and would want us to wait for him. I concluded I wasn't going to lie, so I just didn't say anything and left.

It was considerably cold out, to tell the truth—that is, kind of keen. I was glad I'd bundled up as I did. We strolled forth at a rapid rate. The wind was in our back and it hurried us along at a pretty good jog. This would be at our disadvantage coming back though, we reckoned. We hoped the goodness that the ghost wouldn't chase us far.

As we got out a little beyond old Josh Jenkins's the road was drifted pretty bad. We hadn't thought of that. It would be pretty tough running from ghosts through snow-drifts of this size and the wind in your face. The further we got the worse it seemed to get. It looked kind of discouraging, I assure you. But we strove on. We weren't going to be baffled. We were going to carry out our project or it would be a caution. But the snow seemed to be getting deeper and deeper all the time. As we got out in sight of the Holler such a sight of snow you never saw. It was astonishing to say the least.

"Wall, says Lew, 'what do you think uv the scene?' when we got pretty near there."

I stopped and viewed the prospect as it lay out before us in rapid succession.

"Well," says I, "we've set out to do it; we've got to carry it out now, I suppose, if the snow is over our heads. I'm not one to back out of it."

"But s'posin' ther' ghost gits ter chasin' us," says Lew, "how'll we git over this snow? Seems ter me we'd stand a mighty poor chance, in case uv emergencies. Ghosts, you know, kin git over snow mighty quick."

I never thought of that. There was a considerable plausibleness in his argument.

"That's a fact," says I,—"that's very true. But if we can't do anything else, there's plenty of trees around the Holler and we can climb them."

So we advanced a little further. We turned neither to the left hand nor to the right, but kept on—me

Liver Disorders

Soon cause the blood to become contaminated and require prompt treatment. The most marked symptoms are loss of appetite, headache, pains in the back or side, nausea, and relaxation of the bowels. Ayer's Pills assist nature to expel the superabundant bile and thus restore the purity of the blood. Being purely vegetable and sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, mild in operation, and without ill effects.

"After many years' experience with Ayer's Pills as a remedy for the large number of ailments caused by derangements of the liver, peculiar to malarial localities, simple justice prompts me to express to you my high appreciation of the merits of this medicine for the class of disorders I have named."—S. L. Longbridge, Bryan, Texas.

"I had tried almost everything for chronic liver complaint, but received no relief until I used Ayer's Pills. I find them invaluable."—W. E. Watson, 77 East Illinois St., Chicago, Ill.

Ayer's Pills,

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

learning this art at piecemeal study, and while pursuing other occupations. The success of stenographers as compared with the success of young men in any other vocation in life, will be seen to be marvellous and encouraging. The author of this system was himself a farmer's boy and learned the art while following the plow. The information he gives in this pamphlet will be of interest and value to every young man (or young woman either) who must earn his own living. The pamphlet is mailed free to anyone writing for it and mentioning the paper in which this article appears. 144m

Address D. L. SCOTT-BROWNE,
251 West 14th St., New York, N. Y.

WILL YOU SUFFER WITH DYSPEPSIA and Liver Complaint? Shiloh's Vitalizer is guaranteed to cure you. Sold by Geo. V. Rand.

To Our Subscribers.

The SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT which appeared in our columns sometime since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. KENDALL CO., of Enostrough Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Diseases," whereby our subscribers were enabled to obtain a copy of that valuable work FREE by sending their address to B. J. Kendall Co. (and enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing same) is renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the Horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and Canada, make it a standard authority. Mention this paper when sending for "Treatise." 14-131

SLEEPLESSNESS, made miserable by that terrible cough. Shiloh's Cure is the Remedy for you. Sold by Geo. V. Rand.

For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Price 25 cents; Sold by Geo. V. Rand.

BEST ON EARTH

SURPRISE SOAP

THE GREAT SELF WASHER TRY IT

Surprise Soap is the best soap ever made. It is made of the finest materials and is the most economical soap ever used. It is the only soap that will wash clothes and keep them white and bright. It is the only soap that will wash dishes and keep them clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the face and keep it clear and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the hair and keep it soft and smooth. It is the only soap that will wash the body and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the hands and keep them clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the feet and keep them clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the whole body and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the soul and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the heart and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the mind and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the spirit and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the life and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the death and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the resurrection and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the glory and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the kingdom and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the heaven and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the hell and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the earth and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the sea and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the air and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the fire and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the water and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the wind and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the sun and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the moon and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the stars and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the planets and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the galaxies and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the universe and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the whole world and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the whole creation and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the whole of God's works and keep it clean and bright. It is the only soap that will wash the whole of God's glory and keep it