Th Pu The Forsake Firm-House.

Against the word a milis is stands, Ghost of a dead home, staring through Its broken lights on wasted lands Inplowed, unsown, by scythe unshorn

Once rich and ripe with golden corn. Of healthful herb and flower bereft.

Through weeds and tangle only left A lilac spray, once blossom clad,

Beside the roofless perch a sad, Pathetic red rose blooms. His track, in mold of dust and drouth. On floor and hearth the squirrel leaves, And in the fireless chimney's mouth

His web the spider weaves. The leaning barn about to fall No cat le low in yard or stall.

So sad so drear! It seems almost Some haunting Presence makes its sign ; That down you shadowy lane sum: ghost Might drive his spectral kine!

The St. Mary's Argus, which know the editor of the Mitcue! Advocate, thus ralies him on the "Irish question :-

Mr. M. C. Cameron, in his speech at St. Thomas the other day, said to his audience "You will find acres of the public lands divided among Pat Kelly, a Huron Tory bummer, and a few other." At these remarks the Mitchell Advocate man takes off his coat-metaphorically speaking, of course; he generally uses the blackthorn and keeps on the coat and wades right in 10 defence of the great Irish nation. He assumes that Mr Cameron "insulted the Irish whom he delights to "slap in the face." Most peop e will wonder where in the above remark of Mr. Cameron, which is the quotation from which the Adocate finds material enough for its ous augut, the great Irish nation was so grossly insult There was no reference whatever to Kelly's nationality, but to the fact that he had secured a good many acres of public lands because of his political adherence to Sir John A. Macdonald. The Advocate man does not care a straw for Mr. Kelly or the Irish nation outside of himself and his own family, only so far as he may be able to use them for his own ends. He is forever misconstruing the remarks of public men when they happen to action Ireland or the Irish, or even when they do not meation them, as in the present case. His object is very apparent to every person in the county of Perth. He seeks to curry favor with the Irish people on every occasion possible, but if he deceives himself into believing that ne deceives the Irish he is very sadly deceived indeed. They have measured the Advoeate man years ago, and the more he plays the sycophant the more utterly they despise him, and the less palitical support—which he is always playing for—will he receive at the r hands. If the Advocate man is burning to defend nationanties, why did he not defend the Scotch against the sne rs of Mr Thomas Cowan in the St. Marys town hall the other evening? Instead of that he seemingly enjoyed the yarns told by that worthy at the expense of the Scotch. But the Irish are evidently his peculiar care. If the Scotch were numerous in Logan instead of the Irish, per-haps he might have seen fit to defend them, but he has no hopes of getting political support from the Scotch, and political support from the Scotch, and therefore does not see any use in troubling about them. The Irish do not thank the Advocate for trying to make people believe that they are forever being insulted. They may be sensitive enough to insults, but they do not generally and the sensitive that the sensitive enough to insults, but they do not generally and the sensitive that erally pick up the gauntlet before it is thrown down. Of all the various systems that have been introduced, advocated and practiced, during the last twenty-five years, the most popular and prevalent today in the vicinity of New York, is what is known as the Kniffin system, or some modification of it, and its popularity is, no doubt, chiefly due to its simplicity and ease of practice. The trellis consists of two wires on posts set at convesists of two wires on posts set at convenient distances; the lower wire, two the ground, and the upper one four and a half to five and a half feet. In our own practice, we adopt the greater dis trance for convenience in passing under. No medicine or doctor could give i from one row to another, in any part of relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters. the vinyard. The vines are grown with two main stems, or trunks, from near the ground. One of these is stopped at either wire, and two arms are trained along each wire. These are pruned to along each wire. These are pruned to five or six buds each, and the shoots as they grow, are pinched during summer as above stated. This pinching, and the hanging down of the shoots as the fruit developes and increases in size and weight, checks the flow of sap and teads to the formation of good, plump buds at the base of the shoots, which, when ripe, are termed "canea." The annual pruning thereafter consists in cutting off the entire arm, up to cane nearest the the entire arm, up to cane nearest the trunk, bringing that cane around on the wire to take the place of the arm removed, and shortening it in to five or six buds. Sometimes the bud expected to make this arm may, from some cause, fail to grow, or may turn the wrong way, so that the cane cannot be bent around where needed; in such access, take the obstinate one to two buds, one of which obstinate one to two buds, one of which will very likely come to where it is wanted the next year. No positive rule can be laid down to follow inflexibly, as there is no system, that all not at times need a little modification of variation in some of its details to the final accomplishment of its aim.
