Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE AGE OF COLOR.

Whenever one declares that anything is different now than it used to be, someone rises up to tell one that history is only repeating itself. I had even heard people try to claim that the old Roman civilization had as many marvelous inventions as a modern one. But here is one statement that I am sure no one can controvert that surely there never was a time when there was such lovely, such exquisite and such widely varying colors as there are to-day.

Go to any summer resort and walk through the gathering place of the lady-birds (as a friend of mine likes to call them) and see if your eyes are not filled with colors so lovely and so varied that Nature herself might envy.

Can You Remember When Sweaters Didn't Exist?

Take, for example, the sweater of to-day. Can you not remember when sweaters first came to be (does it seem possible to you, Reader Friend, the possessor of from one to a dozen sweaters of varying design, that there was a time when sweaters did not exist, except the over-head kind for males and athletic females?) that they were presented to us only in a plain and very durable color?

Behind the sweater of to-day—like Solomon in all his glory, it surely vie with the lilies of the field. I know of no prettier picture than three or four young girls strolling down a village street on a summer afternoon with linked arms, each in a sweater of some glorious or exquisite color. And by a miracle, like the flower that Nature flings into her world, these colors never seem to fade.

The Blues of the Olden Days.

I am sure there was nothing like the blues of the olden days. I can well remember when there was only light blue and dark blue, and how I wish there was something between (the dire to my weakiness). And then I remember when the first blues that were between began to come in. Wasn't one of the first named "Alice" in honor of our President's daughter? And doesn't that place the arrival of the new blues as not more than 20 years ago?

And then the reds. In the early days there used to be red and pink and crimson and magenta (a color quite as heavy and ugly as its name) and a little later, cerise. But think of the gamut of colors, from deep red to pink, to-day.

Have We Lost the Colors of the Old Days?

As for greens, there were nil green and light green and dark green to be sure, but how many shades of green do you think you would find between dark green and palest green to-day? Perhaps someone will remind me that we no longer hear of certain colors of the olden days—puce, for instance, and mauve and maroon. I admit we do not hear of them by name, but I am sure we have them with us under some new pseudonym (not but what we could well spare "puce," which the dictionary informs me is a brownish purple. Can you imagine anything more hideous?). Truly this is the age of color. And truly I am glad I was born in it.

Sugar.

Good news. Sugar prices in Canada toppled down $1.50 a hundred on Monday.

Flour prices went down 70 cents a barrel.

News of the price changes came to Sydney wholesalers in telegrams from the sugar refiners and the flour millers, a wholesaler told The Record this morning.

The lower price of sugar will become effective here at once, but the effect of the reduction of the price in flour at the mills will not be quickly apparent. The reduced flour price will be effective in the case of shipments made from the mills in the future and, of course, so far as Cape Breton is concerned, this will mean some slight delay.

A second wholesaler gave the flour reduction as only fifty-cents a barrel and put at 10 days the length of time before the reduction would be felt here. He added the further bit of information that mill feeds had dropped $5.50 a ton.

But, anyway, the lower prices have come—that's the big thing—Sydney Record.

The one-piece frock and matching wrap are still greatly in favor.

OVERWORKED WORDS.

"Meteculous!" That weary word up before me everywhere; the blamed thing may have been a bird before they wore it all threadbare. Gals-worthily sprung it years ago, and it was worthy of his gall, and it's been chivied to and fro till it requires the bier and pall. It flavors everything I read, it's plastered up with printer's ink, it's down at heel and gone to seed, and it would drive strong men to drink. And "Grueling" should take its place upon the list of deadly crimes; whenever there's an auto race we see it used a thousand times. When fat-heads battle in the ring, what time they should be plowing corn, the scrap is described as "gruelling," regardless of the purist's scorn. And how I hate the "gripping" tales that figure in cheap magazines, turned out in large and endless sales by sweat-hacks for pork and beans. "Compelling" is another word that nearly breaks my grand old heart, used in connections most absurd—"compelling" songs, "compelling" art. I meet the chestnuts every hour, and into tears I often burst; and of all words that make life sour, "meteculous" I hate the worst.

Just Folks

THE CONTENTED WISE.

Not by the wise are the great things done, For the wise are pleased with the things that are; They've charted the course of the morning sun And know the name of each separate star, And it's ever the way of the wise to cling Tenaciously to an olden thing.

Who ventures away from the traveled road, To follow his dream into realms afar, Shall walk alone with his heavy load, For the wise sit down with the things that are; Into the new must a young man go, But the wise stay back on the roads they know.

Yet ever the wise give way to youth, And ever the old must fear the new, For never men come to the final truth Or the end of things which their skill shall do, And he who follows his dream, and tries To better the world, shall teach the wise.

Heed not the wise when they tell you nay! Youth be brave as you build the new! What though you're scoffed at, day by day, You shall win if the dream be true; Linger not where the wise men stand—Progress waits on your willing hand.

The box-coat will be a favorite for winter suits.

Many suit models have very long coats and tight belts.

Skirts of suits and tailored gowns continue short.

All the winter coats have high collars, usually of fur.

Nets and laces are replacing organdie for neckwear.

The "petal" skirt appears on some smart fall models.

Transparent trains are the latest whim of evening gowns.

Dresses, hats, wraps and blouses are lavishly embroidered.

Togues hats, especially small ones, are still in good fashion.

Duveltyne and crepe de chine are a smart fall combination.

Sleeves may be bell-shaped or long and tight and wrinkled.

Very smart are the leather hats for motoring and sports wear.

Imitation aigrettes are made of horsehair and elephant whiskers.

A frock of gray taffeta uses bands of black velvet as trimming.

One dress model has a high, loose collar, which buttons at the side.

Moral Propaganda.

Most people will wish success for the new "moral" newspaper that is to be published in Chicago, a paper that is to exclude as far as possible all stories of vice and crime, but the fact remains that it must be a publication apart from the daily newspaper, and one that does not pretend to set a new standard for the daily press.

As a propaganda for good it deserves every encouragement, but it will be a propaganda, and not the true mirror of life that the daily newspaper ought to aspire to be.

"The free competition of truth and error in the open market," upon which progress depends, does not admit of excluding the truth about evil. Neglecting the fact that vice and crime exist will not put an end to them. "Pitiless publicity" is the cure for wrong con-

Flour Due for Decline.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 26.—With wheat on the decline flour is due for a further drop in price according to local millers.

Western millers commenced on August 30th to mill the 1920 crop. Practically all the stocks in Western Canada of the war grade of flour has been disposed of. Pre-war grade flour at $6.37 1-2, as compared with $7.15 under Government control of wheat.

Retail grocers, Saturday sold 98 pound (half barrel) pre-war grade flour at $7.75.
