—Thomas B. Scott, Vanneck, has furnished the Adventiser with specimens of four, five, six and seven-leaved clover, each plucked last Saturday by his daughter. Notice. So many people have found it difficult to find a four-leaved specimen that it will seem to them incredible that such a group should be secured by any single individual. A few years ago Mr. Scott sent a similar combination to the Adventiser, making it still more extraordinary. Mr. Scott also mentions a remarkable stalk of alfafa, or California clover, 21 inches long, and having 13 branches and 74 leaves. No appearance yet of blossoming; said to bear three cuttings yearly.
