

Denies The Shooting

New Patterson on the Witness Stand Declares Her Innocence.

Dramatic Recital of the Events Leading Up to Fatal Ride.

Relates Her Struggle With the Infatuated Bookmaker in Cab.

New York, Dec. 19.—Did you or did you not shoot me, Young, Nan? asked Lawyer Levy of Miss Nan Patterson today.

"I did not," said the witness in a firm voice. "I would give my own life to bring him back if it were in my power. I never saw the revolver with which he was shot. There was a flash, and then the end."

In a voice quivering with emotion, but filled with dramatic intensity, she related to the jury the scenes in her life which led to the fatal ride with Young.

Not only did Young shoot her, but she denied that she had ever been in a cab with him.

She denied that she was dismayed because Young was about to leave her and going to Europe, after being told that she was over between them.

On the other hand, she stated that as a result of her conference with Young, it was agreed that she should join him in England and take apartment in the Hotel Cecil, London, taking care that she kept her whereabouts a complete secret from Mrs. Young and Young's relatives.

An important feature brought out was the fact that Young was the woman on the card on which he wrote her name and address, saying it was something she might need.

The crowded courtroom became suddenly still when the former shot girl took the stand. The first of her testimony related to herself was given in a low, even voice, but as she proceeded, her tones became more and more shrill in her account of the fatal cab ride, her voice was filled with tragic emphasis.

Early in her story Miss Patterson told of her original meeting with Young, and the circumstances which led to her trip. She told of her talk with Young the night before his proposed departure for Southampton.

Following his departure, she was contacted by a telephone message from Young to go to the pier to see him off, or to ride down town and see him at his home before the shooting. She was asked to describe what happened while driving down West Broadway.

"We talked about his going away and questioning him about my coming to meet him," she said.

"I did not say anything, and finally he said, 'But I don't feel positive that you are going to drive to the pier with me, are you?'"

"Well, there was no answer," she said. "I said, 'Are you going?'"

"I said, 'I've made up my mind not to, but you go over there and get things quieted down until the folks have forgotten about things. By that time I will meet you at the pier, and I believe that's what you mean that. Then he grabbed me by the hand nearest to him, and told me to get up and get into the car. Someone or other I got away from him. I told him that I would not go. He said, 'If you don't come over with me, I have to wait at the Saratoga meeting, my money may be gone. I believe that's what you mean. I've lost that money. Now I'm losing my little girl, do you see?'"

"He grabbed me and hurt me so badly that the tears came into my eyes. I tried to struggle away from him, but he held me, and I went with him."

"There was no—no—the end." "You heard a report," her lawyer asked.

"Yes." "Was the pistol in Young's hand?"

"I had not seen the pistol. Mr. Young said over my shoulder that he was having a gun, and I thought he was having a gun. He kept twitching and twitching. I called to him that he was having a gun, but he would not tell me. I believe I put my hand up and told the cabman to drive to the pier. I don't know whether I did. That was my idea. It seemed to me that I should get someone to pay attention to what I said. A policeman put in the cab and I told him that I was shot. Caesar Young," asked Mr. Levy.

"Mr. Levy," she said, "I did not have any pistol."

The Finland is due at Dover at 6 o'clock tonight, allowing Admiral Davis to take the midnight train, and arrive in Paris shortly before the proceedings begin. As a coincidence the British Admiral on the commission, Rear Admiral Sir Lewis A. Beaumont, is coming on the same midnight train. The two English speaking members of the commission will thus meet each other during the trip.

President Loubet will receive the admirals in full uniform at 9:45 o'clock Tuesday and Foreign Minister Delcasse will breakfast the commission at noon the sessions thereupon beginning.

RUSSIA'S NEW NAVY. Preparing to Replace Ships Destroyed by the Japanese. St. Petersburg, Dec. 19.—The Russian navy commission is visiting the United States studying the latest types of ships and methods of construction. The members of the commission assert that Russia needs a fleet of 200 battleships and cruisers, the cost being estimated at $200,000,000. It seems to be the purpose of the St. Petersburg government to build a fleet of 200 ships for the Baltic squadron, so as to have a fleet of 200 ships in the North Sea. It is not expected that the conclusion of the war in the Far East will be the end of the Russian navy's expansion. It is expected that the navy will be increased to 200 ships in the next few years.
