Badly at the Hands of the Eminent Mr. Osler-Other Witnesses Who Testify as to the Condition of the Elevator-A Resume of the Case as it Has Progressed Up to Date.

The third week of the greatest criminal trial in the history of Canada has closed, and though the details of the case are being placed before the public for the fourth time in ten months, the interest evinced is as great as when, in February last, The World unearthed the alleged crime and published the series of articles which led to the arrest of Harry Place and Dallas Theodore Hyams, upon the charge of having murdered Willie Wells.

of having murdered Willie Wells. When the present trial opened on Nov. 5, certain journals predicted for it a speedy termination, stating as the ground of the prophecy that the Crown's case had been greatly weak-ened, while the defence had gathered corresponding strength. As every one knows, the prediction has utterly fall-ed of fulfilment, 17 days having al-ready elapsed since the trial began, with every prospect that the statement made by The World more than two weeks ago will be borne out, that it would be near the first of December before the jury had passed decision upon the evidence and announced the figte of the twins. No doubt the profact of the twins. No doubt the pro-phecy of the collapse of the Crown's case was inspired, but no prediction made by Weather-Man Wiggins ever went wider of the mark. The Crown's bifficultics.

The fact that 14 days were neces-sary to place the evidence for the pro-secution before the jury is in itself a weakness to their case, which the Crown officers appreciated, but could not avoid. The fact that almost three not avoid. The fact that almost three years have elapsed since the life of Willie Wells was cruelly crushed out with the massive iron weight in the fatal warehouse basement enhances the difficulties a Crown officer always encounters in fastening the guilt of crime upon those whose hands are stained with the life-blood of their fel-low man If the Hyams twins are

It did not detract from the strength of the case as first presented against the prisoners. The testimony of the street car men was intended to show that it was 11 a.m. before Harry Hyams went for Dr. King, on the day of the tra-gedy, and that the killing therefore could not have occurred between 9 and 10 o'clock, as the defence allege. 10 o'clock, as the defence allege. This point is not of great importance to the prosecution, for, as Mr. Osler said to the jury, in his opening address, "Al few moments of time make 'little dif-ference, as a man who could be there to help take the weight off Wells' head could have been there to help put it or "

Where Mr. Osler Seored a Big Point.

The only object the Crown had in pressing for the admission of the evi-dence of Mrs. Hyams and her solicitor was to trace the proceeds of the death of Wells into the hands of the prisoners. Without this testimony the motive could not have been clearly es-tablished, and as might be expected, there was rejoicing in the camp of the defence at the prospect of its exclu-sion. But the jubilee was of short duration. By a move which was en-tirely unexpected by the defence, Mr. Osler was about to prove that at least $5500 of the money was secured by the prisoners by forgery, when Messrs. Johnston and Lount made an offer of compromise This was accented by the compromise. This was accepted by the Crown, and the defence in admitting the reception of $22,800 of the insurance money surrendered everything they had won by His Lordship's rul-ings, and the Crown's case remained stronger on this point than at the last trial.

Where the Left Eye Wound Comes In.

Where the Left Eye Wound Comes In. Of the new evidence presented by the Crown, that which contributes greatest strength to their case is the testimony of witnesses proving that there was a wound over the left eye. When it is remembered that the whole fabric of the defence rests upon the assumption that Wells was struck on the right side of the head by the fall-ing weight, and again in the same place as his head lay on the floor, the importance of this piece of evidence will be appreciated. In the now cele-brated Johnstonian theory no pro-vision is made for the infliction of this second wound, and the Crown will ask the jury to believe that it was the re-
