There is a telegraphic situation in this city which has been the cause of more worry to me than any of the other hundreds under my control. It is the office at the board of trade.

"At the board of trade!" echoed Miss Elinor, looking at him in some alarm.

"Yes," he answered. "That situation demands qualities aside from those of key or pen, which I should be loath to think unobtainable, but which I, of late, have had some difficulty in securing. What we need there is absolute secrecy. There must be no suspicion, even of any leakage from the wires, because messages come there that make and unmake fortunes. Of course, many of the messages are in cipher, but nevertheless, cipher or not, the utmost caution must be observed so that none, save those to whom the messages are sent, shall get the slightest inkling of their contents. I have changed operators there three times in as many months, and while against the present man I have no direct proof—if I had I would discharge him—there have been complaints and vague rumors of leakage which are, to say the least, most annoying. I have made up my mind, in any case, to remove that young man to the interior of the state, and the only reason he has not been removed before now is that I can't for the life of me tell with whom to replace him. Until you came in it never occurred to me to give the situation to a woman. It doesn't quite jump with our preconceived notions of things that a woman, of all persons, should be the one to keep a secret, but most of our preconceived notions are wrong, and if you are willing to try the experiment I am. Of course, you would be dealing entirely with men, but I am sure you would meet with nothing but the utmost courtesy from all."

"Oh, I am sure of that," said Miss McClintock earnestly. "If you give me the opportunity, I don't think you will have reason to regret it."

"Very well. Then we shall look on it as settled. Call here tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, and I will myself escort you to the board of trade. I shall leave one of my assistants with you in the office for a week, and by that time you will probably be familiar with your new duties. Anything you do not understand he will be at hand to explain."

Promptly at the appointed hour Elinor waited upon the manager at his office, and together they walked to the tall building in which was housed the board of trade, the only legalized gambling place in the city, where methods differed somewhat from those at Monte Carlo, these differences being entirely in favor of the Mediterranean resort, for there the unscrupulous gambler obtains no advantage over his comparatively innocent competitor, and he has no special market value. Every city in the land holds up its hands in horror at the mention of Monte Carlo, but points with just pride to its Stock Exchange building. Thus do we honestly acquire the reputation of being a humorous people.

Mr Sandys was silent during the greater part of the walk, and Elinor's mind was busy picturing the new life
