

" Time has vindicated and justified his approval or disapproval of the important measures which claimed his consideration during his long and brilliant parliamentary career. His strong, healthful nature tolerated no cant or affectation. He made no special professions of personal religious experience or attainment, but his strong faith was always manifest, and he made the "Sermon on the Mount" the rule of his speech and action. He was a member of a small religious society, but he was too broad and liberal to be a sectarian. He was just and even generous to all other nationalities, but he was proud of his own birthright, and we love him none the less that he was a true and loyal Englishman. As Americans, we owe him a debt of gratitude which cannot be paid for his unwavering advocacy of the Union cause during the civil war. But for him the Confederacy might have been recognized by the British Government. Can we better express our gratitude for his invaluable services than by keeping his example before the young of our land, so that when called upon to participate in the affairs of State they may be influenced by the purity of motive and prove themselves as uncompromising defenders of the right.

Very sincerely, thy friend,

JOHN G. WHITTIER.
