Frequent have been the notices of the liberality of his Excellency the Governor General. It seems that his benevolence knows no bounds. No sooner do we hear of his charities in the far west than we are called upon to record his beneficence in this section of the Province.

The Church of England owes him a debt of gratitude

The Church of England owes that a cover religious instruction to the workmen on the Beauharnois Canal.—
The want of a suitable building for the service of that Church compelled an application to his Excellency, and he readily assented to the application, paying the above mentioned sum.

It affords us satisfaction to state that this bounteous gift has tended to secure the objects of the petition, as the Rev. Mr. Brethour, the Minister of Durham, was thus enabled to perform Divine Service every Sunday for the

ING SOCIETY, FOR THE YEAR 1842-3.

The funds of "The Church of England Clothing Society" being exhausted, it is found necessary again to appeal to the public for their annual support. The statement given below will show the expenditure of the money collected last winter, and from the essential relief which of their insufficient clothing.

The assistance bestowed last year produced these valuable results, in addition to the daily suffering which it lessened in giving protection from extreme cold. The books which accompany the subscription list will shew more particularly the names of the persons who have been benefited, the different articles of clothing that were purchased, and the entire expenditure of the money, sides a statement of many donations in clothing that were kindly given in addition to the money subscribed.

question of the Seat of Government, which the minority contend is unparliamentary and illegal. The subject was debated for o nearly four hours with remarkable ability by the opposition and when the question came to a division, His Honour the Speaker expressed his dissent from the opinion the majority entertained. The original motion introducing the subject was made by Mr. Sullivan, who, on the House of Assembly Resolutions being communicated to the Council, moved they should be taken into consideration on Monday next. To this Mr. Morris moved in amendment that as the Council had already deliberately disposed of the subject, it was unparliamentary to annul what had already been solemnly legislated upon. After debate a division was taken on the amendment, when there appeared for it 13, and against it 18; a division on the original motion was then had and carried by the same comparative num-Affirmative having been made by the Speaker,

The Hon. Mr. Sullivan said, in moving the passage of the first clause, he would remark that the bill was originally a Government measure prepared by himself and his hon. friend Mr. Draper: and at the time of the secession of his honorable charge of it, and conduct it through the Lower House, of which he was then a member. The consequences of there being no Bankrupt Law were these: that honest men were often induced to become rogues; and unfortunate men, who failed fairly, were driven to the most desperate and degrading shifts to keep their heads above water, because there was no law permitting them to give up their affairs into the hands of their creditors, and to make a full disclosure of their estates and effects. In the course of his former practice, he had seen numerous cases, where fraudulent conveyances had been made, and the rights benefit of the British and colonial Ship owner. of merchants to receive back their property utterly defeated, in the most clear and palpable manner. The time when a man failed was when he could not pay, and it was unfair and unjust for such a person to go not pay, and it was unfair and unjust for such a person to go on struggling against adverse circumstances by means of secret securities, and other dishonest subterfuges, iostead of coming boldly before his creditors and allowing them to make the best of what he had left. He had known in business one person of what he had left. He had known in business one person of what he had left. He had known in business one person of what he had left. He had known in business one person of what he had left. He had known in business one person of what he had left. He had known in business one person to go without the knowledge of the other; he had seen Attorney's clerks beseiging the Crown office, and the strongest party, with no other priority of claim, who could push himself in, got a precedence over the others and gained perhaps £1000. In Upper Canada they had gone on without a brankrupt law, until such practices had become disgraceful. Now there was no disgrace in a man failing, if he did so honestly, from causes over which he had no control. All that could be required by human principles was prudence, economy, and candour, and if a man had observed those, he was entitled to the protection of a Bankrupt Law. A good Bankrupt Law prevented those who failed until the countries beyond the sea must be carried on in British Bottoms.

He made these observations because he had been twitted several times during the present session with not having made "perfect" laws; whereas he looked upon that man who plumed himself on having made

In the case of Canada, Quebec is the port which complies

I have noticed a statement in your despatch, and also in the memorial of the Board of Trade, that Kingston, Toronto, and Hamilton, have been recently erected into Free Ports: a statement which would convey the erroneous impression that these ports possess certain privileges which are denied to Montreal As regards Foreign sea going Ships, the position of these Towns precludes the possibility of any question arising; the advan-tages which they possess in the privilege of warehousing good ought by land or inland navigation, are also possessed already to the fullest extent by Montreal.

I have to observe in conclusion that it is competent for the Merchants of Montreal, to import from sea in British Ships Merchants of Montreal, to import from sea in British Sulps into that Port any description of goods from any part of the world, and in like manner to export goods in British Ships, though Foreign ships are restricted from proceeding up the River St. Lawrence beyond Quebec; and that there is no objection to Vessels and Craft belonging to the United States of America proceeding from the Ports situated on the United States side of the Lake Erie and Ontario to Montreal, for the Durpose of delivering their cargoes at that nort for consumption. purpose of delivering their cargoes at that port for consumption, or for exportation in British Ships, or to be Warehoused.

The Hon. Mr. GOODHUE spoke in favour of the Bill having But to constitute Montreal a Fice Port in the most unrestricted sense, for all the purposes mentioned in the Act, 3, and The Hon. Unless some such addition were made, the Bill would be a source of grief and complaint. It could just as well be done in the present, as in a new Bill.

The Hon. Mr. Draper said he should not consider the role of the state of the present of the present of the state of the possessions the unlimited right of navigating the St. Lawrence from the Port of Quebec to the junction of that River with Lake Ontario, a distance of 370 miles, and passing in its course for 250 miles entirely through British Territories, in its course for 250 miles entirely through British presents and the countries. measure perfect until something in the nature of an insolvent law were incorporated with it.

In the course for 250 miles entirely through British Territories, would be a proceeding so irreconcileable with the policy of this Country that Her Majesty's Government are under the necessary. We were incorporated with it.

Hon. Mr. Sullivan said, the question of retroactivity was sity of declining to accede to the wishes of the Board of Trade,

By these resolutions the Members for the city are called upon to support the recommendation of the Provincial Administration to establish the Seat of Government in the City of Montreal; and I gathered from the discussion that my opinion was known to be adverse to the proposition.
