

military authorities to combat the insecurity that prevails in the country. Since the current democratic process has not yet, on the whole, produced tangible results in terms of the human rights situation, Canada is favourable to the renewal, for another year, of the mandate of the UN expert responsible for monitoring the Haitian situation closely. This mandate will assume its full importance in the event that the December 16 elections permit the installation of a democratic government.