

under the direction of the committee at headquarters, (or the organizer of the work, if the management is in the hands of one man as is often the case.)

The formation of the committee: A member of the party who is active in the polling sub-division should get together not only the active workers, but every one else who can be induced to take a cordial part in the work. Experience shows that in an ordinary polling sub-division, if ten good men can get together, they can do good work. This is almost an invariable rule. There is no man without influence. The best way to get the committee together in country places, is for the chairman of the polling sub-division, or some other active worker, to drive over the division, calling on all the party men, and making a special request for them to attend at some convenient place at a stated time. Another method is to send by first notice to each, calling them to meet at a certain time and place. Having got the committee together, the chairman and other officers should be appointed. The chairman should be the man who can give the most time and takes the greatest interest in the work in that division, and whose standing is such that his intimate connection with the organization will inspire others to take hold of the work.

If a notice by post is sent, something similar to the following form can be used:
