The Telegraph advises Newfoundhand and Canada to have patience on the fishery question, because no government will be permitted to sacrifice the vital interest of any colony to curry favor with any power.
The Natal Mercury comments on the Newfoundland crisis that the conclusion of the modus vivendl is a blow to the entire system of colonial autonomy.
The Chronicle, referring to the Newfoundland fisheries arrangement, says obviously Americans get much the best of such matters, but as long as the ancient French treaty is main tained they have also the best rights. Newfoundland cannot disregard British treatles and at the same time call for British gunboats to protect heristing.

EVOKES BITTER CRITICISM London, Oct. 10.—The publication of the text of the Néwfound-land modus vivendi evokes strong editorial articles this morning. The opposition newspapers condemn the government for over-riding the wishes of the colony in order to conclliate the United states, and declare that the terms of the arrangements fully justify the intense indignation which is expressed. The Morning Post is of the opinion that this should convince Mr. Haultain, in a brilliant speech In which he went into the whole ques-I have nothing to 'squeal' about and nothing to give up. "I was a little confused regarding the time I left London for Detroit, before the investigation commenced, but I do not think it makes any material differ-ence to this case what time I left, or what time or where I had my supper on that occasion." In which he went into the whole ques-tion, pointed out that if the contro-verted election law was not in force, as was claimed by the Liberal law-yers, there was absolutely no redress for the public from fraudulent and corrupt, election methods. It was a matter, he said, of deep concern in that on its decision rested the fate of the whole government.
