CITY TREASURER ISSUES ANNUAL BUDGET SPEECH LOOKS ON BRIGHT SIDE

General Conditions Are Shown to Be Most Encouraging - A Review of the Civic Finances-Opportunities for Power.

"The soundness of the city's financial policy has rarely, if ever, been attacked, and never successfully criticized. The estimates adopted timates adopted by successive councils for a long series of years have almost invariably met with the approval of the citizens who furnish the money; one rea-son being the desire for economy and careful expenditure of money and careful expenditure of money which has, as a rule, governed the civic rulers, and another reason being the feeling on the part of the ratepayers that their sanction must be obtained ere heavy special expenditures can be undertaken. This latter cause tends to public confidence and to the very desirable harmony that has been usually maintained between the citizens and the council in matcitizens and the council in mat-

"We have been favored with prosperous times, and in such good seasons our policy in the past may well be continued with respect to public works entailing heavy outlays. We have in the past considered the ups and downs of the business barometer and so arranged that when general business was contracted and depressed, labor and capital could turn to works of public improvement necessary to the city and helpful to the wage-earner and merchant alike."

-City Treasurer Coady.

City Treasurer R. T. Coady has is sued his annual budget on civic finances. In addition to a presentation of figures Mr. Coady also always takes advantage of the occasion to commen encouragingly on the city's affairs. Regarding the power problem he ob-

Thus, as far as power for industrial expansion is concerned, there is practically no limit to it, and with such resources a great future is assured. And, further, the city has the inducements of superior facilities in the matter of sites and shipping to offer. No city in the Dominion is so favorably situated for the distribution of commodities, and as a central place for the transaction of business."

MONTREAL HAS A SUBURBAN TRAIN SERVICE —TORONTO

The statement in The World yesterday that the Canadian Pacific had brought one of their new suburban cars to Toronto, and would 'make an experiment with it between Toronto and Brampton, brings up a very live topic to the people of this city, namely, what are the conditions under which both the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific will give to Toronto a suburban service like they give to Montreal? For a great many years now Montreal has had a good steam railway suburban service, with commutation tickets to residents of all stations on either system, within 40 miles of the city, on the St. Lawrence. We know of no reason why Montreal was thus preferred other than the one we have often stated in The World, namely, that the chief executives of these roads, being in Montreal pay some attention to the local requirements of that city, while Toronto, being regarded as a way-station "up the line," is not worthy of personal attention of the executive. We venture to say that there is twice the suburban service and five times the possibilities of the suburban service of Montreal, right here in Toronto; and yet, as everybody knows, there is no suburban service out of Toronto. It is true that commutation tickets are sold to Port Credit and Oakville on the Grand Trunk, and to one or two other places, perhaps, but outside of these two or three instances, commutation tickets are very rare. There are also a few instances, we believe, on the Canadian Pacific.

Again, we ask, why this discrimination against Toronto, and again we ask if the merchants of Toronto ever made any effort to induce the railways to give this city a suburban service with commutation tickets. The World proposes not to drop this subject until a satisfactory solution is reached, and our suggestion to-day is that the Retail Merchants' Association and the Board of Trade, and the business men of Toronto generally, take it up. In the meantime The World will try to get some further light and information on the subject from day to day.
