WOMAN: As She Appears for the Public Eye in the News of the Day

Sis Hopkins' Sayings

By Rose Melville.

Ma says most new women are old maids.

Knockers are no longer popular. Press the button.

A man can be "in a state of mind" and not live in Indiana.

It is natural that an absorbing talker should never dry up.

There can't be much left of a man after he over-eats himself.

Ma says women's minds are usually clean—they change them so often.

When some churches can't get money honestly—they have a fair.

Some men smoke a lot in this world in order to be prepared for the next.

Ma says a woman can't very well wear a Merry Widow hat with a divorce suit.

Pa says this world is like a barber shop; we are all waiting for the "Next."

Most old maids are like South Bend's new fire department harness—snappy.

When a man has his eyes set on a girl, she is naturally a jewel in his eyes.

Pa says it is mighty easy to make laws, rules and moral maxims—for others to follow.

When you see a man and a woman lingering interestedly in front of a millinery shop—they are not married.

Pansy Bonehead's latest enigma: Says DeWolf Hopper, it takes a copper in order to cent a crime. Tho this copper's a joke, he never gets broke—for ten of 'em make a dime.

In Society.

A party of young people held a very enjoyable picnic at Long Branch yesterday. Those present were Misses Violet. Ghevier, Mamie Hays, Minnie Nolan, Josephine Nolan, Violet Cassidy, Myrtle Wilkinson, Pearl Ireland, Gladys McClaren, Mary O'Neill, May Clark, Amie Beddell, Agnes Ebarch, Messrs. Sam Wright, Harold Lesjun, Martin Bennett, Frank Howlitts, Frank La Londe, O Le Borp, Jas. McNamara, Chas. O'Brien, Jack Rudolph, Harold Hutchinson, Nelson Hutchinson, A. R. Webb and R. H. Giffin of Pittsburg, Pa.

A. E. Gurney, manager for the Wm. Beatty Co., one of the victims of the smash-up on the C.P.R. near Tottenham last Saturday, is reported to be still in a serious condition, having received a severe gash over the left eye, besides a violent wrench to his right wrist. He is suffering from nervous shock, and has a doctor in attendance.

A quiet wedding occurred at Cooke's Church yesterday afternoon, when Agnes D. Shaw was united in marriage to John A. Lees. Both are well known and have the best wishes of their many friends.

Queen Alexandra visited the Franco-British Exhibition at London and declared herself much impressed with the Canadian section.

Among those sailing on the S. S. "Roma" of the Frbne Line are Miss Boole, Miss Florence Baxter, Miss B. D. Wilson, Miss E. G. Carleton, Miss S P. Williams, Philip Baldwin, Dr. Louis Baldwin, E. E. Thompson, Mrs. E. E. Thompson, Miss Thompson, Miss H. M. Colt, Miss M. Blanche Bosworth, John Soneely, Dr. Frank Crane, Mrs. Eugene Michaux, Miss Marie Raoux, Leon R. Maxwell, Dr. Gustave A. Toronto World's Beauty Patterns

Little Boys' Blouse Suit.
No. 5729

A picturesque blouse frock for the little man is here shown. The front closes diagonally and is secured at the waist with a leather belt. A large collar gives jauntiness to the costume. A shield with narrow standing collar finishes the neck. Little bloomers are worn underneath the dress and are included in the pattern, which will be found very simple and easy to follow. Any of the heavy washable materials, such as pique, linene or duck, could be used, or flannel and lightweight cloth would be equally suitable in making up a frock of this kind. For a child of four years 1 7-8 yards of 54-inch material will be required.

Little Boys' Blouse Suit No. 5729—Sizes for 2, 4 and 6 years.

The pattern here illustrated will be mailed to any address on receipt of ten cents in silver.

THE DREAMER.

When short the days and cold and grey,
When hope seems almost lost,
She only seems to see the gleam
Of diamonds on the frost.

She goes serenely on her way,
From petty cares immune;
In Winter's wildest moods her thoughts
Are far away in June.

Oh fair and blessed gift is that
Of hers (I would 'twere mine),
Of seeing thru the darkest night,
The stars of promise shine.

A gracious creed it is to cheer,
This world so work-a-day,
The tears that fall from April's eyes
But hasten flowers of May.

When surly biting winds of March,
Blow fast o're moor and hills,
She heeds not, seeing but the gold
Of waving daffodils.

The sunlight falls across her path,
Whichever way she goes,
She finds for every tear a smile,
For every thorn a rose.

And so upon her daily path,
She quietly goes along;
A smile upon her gentle lips,
Deep in her heart a song.

Her inmost thoughts I cannot know,
But sure I am of this:
That those far-seeing dreaming eyes,
See visions others miss.

Tea is more susceptible to foreign influences than even butter. This is why it should never be exposed to the air or sold in bulk form. The sealed lead packets of "Salada" Tea preserve the tea in all its native goodness. Insist upon "Salada."

After the Bath.

In very warm weather to rub the body violently after getting out of a tub is not beneficial unless the plunge has been a cold one. Then active friction is required to restore circulation. Otherwise less heat may be generated by merely patting the body with a soft towel, drying off the moisture without bringing the blood to the surface.

KING DENIES HIMSELF SUNDAY ENTERTAINMENT

In Answer to Protests His Majesty Foregoes Elaborate Function In His Honor.

NEW YORK, July 1.—With King Edward in the role of diplomatist and peacemaker the world has become familiar, says the London correspondent of The New York Herald, and I have just learned of an instance which shows how well his majesty keeps his finger upon the public pulse and how keenly alive he is to every wish of the people. This is perhaps one secret of his great personal popularity.

In honor of their majesties a well-known hostess who is a member of a small coterie that enjoys the King's personal friendship, had prepared an elaborate entertainment for next Sunday, when an invitation had been accepted by the King to pass the day at her beautiful country place. The program was to include a magnificent theatrical performance, in which M. Coquelin, Mme. Rejane, Beerbohm Tree, Miss Marie Tempest and several professional danseuses were to appear. This, understand, was being arranged as a surprise to their majesties.

In some way the news of the forthcoming entertainment was given out and a premature description was printed in one of the newspapers within two days. Lord Knollys, the King's secretary, was overwhelmed with letters of protest from all over the country. Not only the nonconformist conscience but that of many other persons was stirred, and their owners did not hesitate to make it known.

The King was quick to act and he gave notice immediately that all the elaborate arrangements that had been made should be canceled, and if he and the Queen should pay the visit promised it would be simply of a quiet, friendly nature.

There is a movement on foot in London society to revive the salon, which, as it exists in Rome to-day, has been unknown in England for upwards of a century. I have heard of several prominent women who are greatly interested in the idea, and her friends say that the Duchess of Sutherland last Friday night really started the movement in this direction.

The duchess wrote notes to many of her friends to stop in at Stafford House on their way to ball, supper or whatever other social functions they had promised to attend in the evening. The result was an informal gathering of many persons of note, who, I am told, were actually surprised at the extent to which they enjoyed themselves. I hear several hostesses are planning to follow the duchess' example.

POOR, FAITHFUL WIFE SLAYS HER TEMPTER

Husband Dogged by Ill-Luck, She Refuses to Leave Him, and Shoots Assailant.

NEW YORK, July 1.—Hours after the police found Caterina Mancusi, his wife, cowering in a dark little cellar, Luigi Mancusi set in the kitchen of his bare flat in the tenement at 155 West 27th-street, his unaccustomed fingers trembling over his children's clothes.

Rosina, the eldest, barely 7, had seen it all and her big black eyes were alive with the excitement of the tragedy. She had been with her mother when La Rosa, the bad man, sneaked into the bedroom and attacked Caterina, and it was she who told the whole story to the police. Angelo, the boy of 4, was too little to understand what it was all about. Luigi was trying hard to be cheerful, but now and then the tears would well up in his eyes.

Ill-luck had seemed to dog Luigi's every step from the time he came here from a little village near Milar, three years ago. He had found work to do at his trade, the making of plaster casts for little marble saints and images of the Virgin, but time after time he lost his place. Finally he gave up the trade his fingers were nimblest at and went carpentering. Then a finger was nearly cut off when an adze slipped, and he lost a month's work. The neighbors helped him pay the rent.

Several months ago, Donato La Rosa, who had been a friend of Luigi in Italy as well as a suitor for Caterina's hand, came to board with the Mancusis, and Luigi was very grateful to La Rosa, who made good pay working as a doorman at a Broadway hotel. La Rosa also used to take Caterina to Coney Island occasionally and Luigi, who was too poor to give his wife any chance for amusement, was pleased.

The carpenter went to work at 7 o'clock this morning, leaving Caterina and the children in bed. Before he had been gone half an hour La Rosa, who is a one-armed man, sneaked into the bedroom and threw his remaining arm around Caterina, and passionately declared he loved her, adding:

"I will not leave you any longer to that stick of a husband. You need not be faithful to a donkey."

Caterina struggled to throw him off, saying:

"I am a good woman, and not a woman of the street."

Finally La Rosa struck her in the face. The woman then wrenched herself free and snatching a revolver from a shelf shot the one-armed man in the head and in the breast, and when he tumbled limp upon the bed, she ran out of the hallway screaming for help. She was subsequently found hiding in the cellar of an adjacent house.

La Rosa was taken the the hospital, where he died.

To Clean Carpet on Floor.

Take half a dozen large potatoes—which will be enough for carpet on one room—grate them and rub well with dry rag into carpet; then take a cloth wrung out of hot water and wipe off thereoly and your carpet will look like new.

Of Spiez: Even one doesn'ot know if there is to be preferred picturesque landscape or the grandious high-mountains, and then it is again the changing, richly formed foreground which makes the whole to a unique, the senses so refreshing landscape.

800 FINE HORSES IN LINE

Simpson rigs, the only departmental store parading. The butchers and purveyors were splendidly represented, and Fairweather showed a handsome outfit. The magnificent triple team of the C.P.R. attracted attention, and the decorations of the horses in one of the coal wagons marked them for beauties. Christie's second prize team looked as good as any of them, and the York Springs rig would have tempted the most depraved on to the water-wagon. Barron's, Doyle's and the Dominion Express were three other fine rigs and a little prancing steed of the Patterson Dairy had a host of admirers.

The Largest Class.

Class 42 was so large that it had to be divided in three and classes 28, 38 and 39 in two each. Extra sets of medals were given for these events.

The marshals had onerous duties, which were most successfully undertaken. F. T. Proctor and R. W. Davies were chiefs in this department.

A JUNE SONG.

Oh heart of mine, when in the sweet June darkness,
The stars gleam thru the maple and the pine,
When every care is lulled by nature's magic,
Why not forget the grief once mine and thine,
Now that once more we've chanced on flower-lined ways;
Let us forget unhappy far-off days.

When each low wind brings wafts of lilac perfume,
Remember not the flowerless years of old;
When lavishly June heaps her treasures round us,
Why call to mind the time of frost and cold?
Oh heart of mine, the wintry days are o'er,
For you and me the roses bloom once more.

Deep in the fragrant woods a thrush is singing
His benediction 'ere he seeks his nest;
Deep in my soul his music finds an echo,
A song of praise for love and home and rest,
Lilac and roses, song and star-gemmed sky!
Let us give thanks, my happy heart and I.
