The Chinese Influence on Spring Modes

Appearing in Almost Every Phase of Feminine Attire, in Hats, Coats, Suits, Dresses, Blouses and Sports Garb, Specially Evident in the Modish Details of the Toilette Such as Tasseled Trimmings, Embroideries, Parasols, and Most Insistent in the Chinese Colors--Yellow, Blue, Red Jade, Green, With Pale Pink and Grey to Supply Restful Backgrounds.

A. Very Chinese the costume above, which you may wear for fancy dress or as a res gown, just as your fancy dictates. The coat is like that worn by some of the high caste Chinese ladies, made of grey crepe silk, all gorgeous with wonderful embroideries, on which gold and vermillion make a perfect blaze. It is lined, too, with vermillion silk. The rest of the costume which is slipped on over the shoulders, is made of smoke grey crepe chiffon over vermillion, which shines through with most delightful effect. Price, $100.00.

B. If you remember the Chinese coolie costume you'll know whence the daintily demure frock above got its round neck and the slashed-up sides of its long blouse. But no coolie costume in the world was ever made like this, of fine, shell-pink voile, adorned with the loveliest grey silk embroidery stitching. The fluted pleats at the sides and wrists held by straps and embroidered buttons, the drawn-work at the hip and the clever hand - stitching throughout make of it a surpassingly dainty frock. Price, $30.00.

C. The fabled phoenix—in China emblem of benevolence and good tidings, has alighted in a decorative burst of color on the pouch-like pockets, formed by the upturned jumper of this delightfully simple frock of oyster white Shantung. But despite the Chinese nature of the front, the back is distinctly French, with its row of close-set buttons from neck to hem, its queer little sash and the group of pleats at the sides. The col-

D. George in a soft shade of grey, with hem, vest and bandings to the mandarin sleeves in the blue that the Chinese love, a hue emphasized in the bead embroidery, make this a veritable poem of a dress! And equally fascinating is the embroidered back, with below the waist a quaint rounded flap, outlined with blue. It is just the sort of simple but diaphanous frock that in these days, when evening dress is so little worn, will serve a thousand useful purposes. Price, $80.00.

T. Ornament for a hat, made of
"Chinese" coins
and beads sewn
on a painted plaque, in various colors. Price, $1.00.
