

compose this church : or, supposing as many more of the congregation not members, to contribute equally, then 7d. from each person in the year. Are there any so poor in this flourishing township who might not contribute this amount, and at the same time have enough to spare for their own Academy, and newspaper ; for libraries and philosophical apparatus ; for Tracts, Bibles and Missions, both Home and Foreign ? 'It is astonishing how lavish men, even professedly christian men, are on their own persons, their luxuries and extravagances, and with what miserly rigidity they draw close the purse strings when the Saviour demands something to advance his cause.

Your Committee are not, however, ignorant that in sustaining some of the above mentioned objects the Baptists of Nova Scotia are not behind other denominations ; in other cases, are perhaps before them ; and yet when they reflect on the extreme importance of these duties to the general religious and social prosperity of the province, and the advancement of the cause of Christ, they cannot avoid expressing their earnest hope that we may all awake to a just sense of the true mode of measuring our performances ; and learning to contrast them with the ample munificence of " the unspeakable gift of God," be thus led to see that we have as yet done nothing for the promotion of the Redeemer's Kingdom, compared either with our obligations or our ability.
