Beals, and daughter of the late Stephen Chapman in the 80th year of her uge. Two daughters survive, Mrs. William Kerr, of Sussex, and Miss Emma Beals at home. The deceased lady had been a resident of Mount Middleton for nore than seventy years. She was a uember of the Methodist church and her ttracting a good deal of attention. The ner, the Rev. F. G. Newton, spoke prayer. At 4 p. m. he addressed the children, who listened attentively and with a great deal of interest to what is quite a new form of address in children's services. Every day a new feature will be introduced and the children are being kept alert with expectation.

The choir under the leadership of E. S. Peacock, were present during a song service which was held at 7.45 and the mission service proper began at eight o'clock. Mr. Newton's subject last night was "What is a Mission and Why Do We Hold One." Archbishop Benson's definition of a mission was:—A mission to the heathen calls attention to unknown facts, while a parochial mission calls attention to neglected facts." The speaker then went on to mention some of the neglected facts.

The fact of God. God is and can be known when men honestly desire and

The fact of God. God is and can be known when men honestly desire and seek that in wiledge. The fact that God uses men to save men. The missioners spoke of the two gifts of the Holy Spirit to the church, prophets and evangelists. The fact that God will not accept past religious experience or positions in lieu of present union and communion with Christ. He said that there were thousands who had been baptized who, irrespective of the demands made of those who have been baptized, are living lives of actual habitual and continual sin. Such, he declared, needed to be converted and to consecrate themselves really consciously and intentionally to serve Christ to the end. A mission calls attention to the fact that one cannot reach Heaven if one is not headed that way. This he enforced by several well applied illustrations.

The mission is being continued daily.

PASSING OF A TYPE

The hard, contemporary fact is that the gloriously maned authors are becoming sadly rarer, even rarer than long-haired actors. The long-haired musician is still with us, though one of the most eminent masters of the pianoforte has yielded something to the modern spirit by submitting briefly to the shears.

Individual age has here a potent influence—age, or the getting through fluence— age, or the getting through with things. What a wonderfully picwith things. What a wonderfully picturesque person Dickens was at 25!

And how matter-of-fact at 40!
Browning suffered a similarly sobering and averaging effect. The same thing is true of many other figures in that period, and it is not easy to guess whether the changing fashion set in during their middle years, or whether advancing age would have effected the same change in any case.—Atlantic Monthly.
