

A TIDE OF TESTIMONY

In Favor of Doan's Kidney Pills Sweeping Over Halifax!

People Being Cured of all Kinds of Kidney Diseases.

Almost everyone in Halifax, from the little white-headed boy to the silver-headed old resident, knows Mr. Thomas Hogan, of 184 Creighton street, and one and all will be interested in reading the story of his rescue from the pangs of pain and his restoration to perfect health.

When our reporter called on Mr. Hogan he was comfortably seated in his easy chair nursing his little daughter of four. Said Mr. Hogan: "About 18 years ago I fell a victim to kidney trouble, and ever since that time have suffered more or less from the terrible effects which almost always follow kidney derangements."

"The disease kept growing steadily worse until in the last few years the various distressing symptoms became almost too much to bear. The pains in my back were nearly continuous. Nervousness and dizziness gave me great distress, and although I tried many remedies I could obtain no relief."

"Finally I was induced to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and am pleased to testify to their remarkable effects. They completely removed the pain from my back and left me feeling like a new man with a fresh lease of life."

"Several of my neighbors have used these pills for kidney troubles, and have not heard of one instance, where, after a fair trial, they have not given entire satisfaction. For my part, I am fully convinced of their powers as a kidney cure, and recommend them to any one suffering as I did."

Doan's Kidney Pills never fail to cure backache, diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, rheumatism, urinary troubles, female weakness, etc. Sold by all druggists at 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1.50. The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

TREE OF TIBET.

Fabulous Prizes Paid For the Leaves of the Sacred Growth.

Few persons probably have heard of the marvelous tree of Tibet. Nevertheless for a long time it has enjoyed a great reputation in the east. It is a sacred tree, and fabulous prizes were paid for a few of its leaves.

In his "Souvenirs de Voyage au Tibet" Pure Huc speaks of this wonderful tree. It is essentially a literary and artistic turn of mind and has the strange habit of producing images and hieroglyphics upon its leaves. Sometimes religious figures take the place of the letters. Pure Huc called the mysterious thing "the tree of a thousand images." These images are found on the leaves, on the stems and on the trunk. Near the temple of Buddha in the village of Lionour, Tibet, this great tree has stood for years, the plague and the puzzle of all the botanists who have ever received the gift of faith.

A great antiquity was given to the tree; indeed it was claimed that it had existed from time immemorial. But an investigation not many years ago proved the images on the tree to be fakes. The trick was simple enough, like every other trick when it is found out. In the spring and in the summer on dark nights a lama, endowed with acrobatic power, with his pockets full of hand stamps, climbed all through the tree and stamped the leaves with all sorts of holy images and characters, the most numerous being the following formula: "Om maha padme om" (Glory to Buddha in the lotus). This is also stamped upon the bark, and the leaves and portions of the bark are sold to visitors.

GENUINELY HARD UP.

Out of Three Hundred Accepting Free Beds Only Five Had "the Price."

A short time ago a curious test was applied at the London Congregational Union's Free Shelter For Homeless Men at Medford hall, in the east of London. The object of the test was to ascertain if the men were really as penniless as they represented themselves to be. The free shelter is intended for men who have not the fourpence necessary to pay for a night's lodging elsewhere, and one night Edward Wilson Gates, the shrewd superintendent of the philanthropic work of the union, announced that he would give sixpence to each man present who could prove that he had some money, but less than fourpence. A check being brought over the 300, that being the maximum allowed in the hall.

"But how shall I know that you have less than fourpence?" asked Mr. Gates. "Search us!" cried the men. "You really mean it?"

"Yes."

"Very well, but if any one objects let him go to the gallery, and I guarantee that he shall not be turned away." Only five of the 300 went up stairs, and the others were thoroughly searched by experienced men. Two hundred and forty-nine had nothing, one had a farthing, 11 had a halfpenny, one had three farthings, 13 had a penny, two had a penny farthing, four had three halfpence, nine twopenny, three two-pence halfpenny and two had three-pence halfpenny. Thus out of the 300 men 295 had not the fourpence necessary for a "fo'penny dose" at a lodging house. It seems pretty clear, therefore, that the men were genuinely "hard up."—London Quiver.

Goldsmith's Generosity.

A beggar once asked alms of Oliver Goldsmith as he walked with a friend up Fleet street, and he gave her a shilling. His companion, knowing something of the woman, conceived the writer for his excess of humanity, saying that the shilling was misapplied, as she would spend it for liquor. "If it makes her happy in any way, my end is answered," replied Goldsmith.

Another proof that the doctor's generosity was not always regulated by discretion was at a time when, after much delay, a day was fixed to pay the £40 due his tailor. Goldsmith procured the money, but a friend calling upon him and relating a pious tale of his good being, asked for the money, but the thoughtless but benevolent author gave him all the money. The tailor called and was told that if he had come a little sooner he could have had the money, but that he had just parted with every shilling of it to a friend in distress, adding, "I would have been an unfeeling monster not to have relieved trouble when in my power."

Swiss Funeral Customs.

Swiss funeral customs are most peculiar. At the death of a person the family inserts a formal black edged announcement in the papers asking for sympathy and stating that "the mourning urn" will be exhibited during certain hours on a special day. In front of the house where the person died there is placed a little black table, covered with a black cloth, on which stands a black jar. Into this the friends and acquaintances of the family drop little black margined visiting cards, sometimes with a few words of sympathy on them. The urn is put on the table on the day of the funeral. Only men ever go to the churchyard, and they generally follow the hearse on foot.

Tough Fare.

In a New Zealand town one of the municipal candidates, a pronounced Scotsman, had received a present of a huge Scotch thistle, which at the moment happened to be lying on the table of his committee room. A friend, entering, withdrew suddenly with the remark, "I beg your pardon; I didn't know you were at luncheon."—San Francisco Wave.

Two Ways of Putting It.

"I motion, Miranda," remarked Mr. Haggabobbin, "that your first husband's children do not fit me."

"No, Cyrus," concluded Mrs. Haggabobbin, with a little sigh. "You don't fit them."—Chicago Tribune.

LIVE STOCK

NEW PROCESS BACON.

1814 Curing Which Secures the Fastest English Taste.

The secret of superior bacon is in the hog, but the various processes of curing have much to do with the results. In an interesting article in The National Stockman L. N. Bonham says that a young Danish naturalist with an unpronounceable name has devised a rapid and cheap process of curing. He aims to avoid the loss of time required by the dry cure or by packing in brine. The pig is killed by a sharp blow on the head, the throat is cut and an opening made to the heart, into which a force pump injects a strong brine that forces the circulating channels and is so evenly and quickly distributed through the carcass that the meat is cured almost as soon as chilled enough to cut and pack.

Besides the saving of time and greater uniformity of salting, it is claimed there is no loss of weight as occurs in the dry cure. The loss by evaporation comes after it has left the packer's hands.

One who has not tested this loss, as has the writer, will be surprised to learn that a ham or a cut of bacon will lose from 10 to 15 per cent from the time it comes out of the packing tub until it goes to the consumer. The retailer understands this, and as soon as a case or box of cured or cavasaded meats comes into the store each piece is weighed, and the price marked on the ham or bacon. When the piece is sold, the customer takes it without reweighing.

Where hams and bacon are mild cured they go to the consumer as promptly as possible. The flavor is better, the meat less dry, and the shrinkage less.

Another process has been patented, called the autocuring process. It has been tested in Sweden since last April, with such success and profit that a well known curer in Copenhagen has introduced it in his two bacon factories in Denmark and five in Sweden. A syndicate has taken up the process, and its meats have been put on sale in England without any notice to buyers of the peculiar method of cure. Merchants repeated their orders for more of the same kind.

These packers recognized the common prejudice against a new thing, so they tested its value without any new claims or names.

This process consists in cooling the meat in a vacuum, and then placing the carcass as 200 pieces in airtight cylinders, after which the air is pumped out and the prepared brine is forced in. It takes only five hours to cure, while in the old process it took five weeks or less, according to the nature of the cure. It is claimed this meat is richer in flavor, retains the natural flavor and juices, and what is more to the point to the packer, increases rather than decreases the weight of the meat. This increase of weight and lessening of time for curing will make it possible for the Danish, Swedish and British curers to sell their mild cure bacon at enough less to enable them to enlarge their business at the expense of Canadian and American curers.

Sugar Beets and Stock Raising.

The relation of sugar beet growing to stock raising is one of the interesting phases of the new industry, says C. F. Curtis of the Iowa experiment station. Along with best culture will come better agriculture, a more intensive system of farming and correspondingly higher returns. Every well tilled field of beets is an object lesson in farming. Having learned how to grow root crops, intelligent stock raisers will never be without them, whether they have a sugar factory in the neighborhood or not. Some years ago, when Sir Henry Gilbert of Rothamsted, England, was here and passing through an agricultural state, he exclaimed: "Where are your roots? What is the matter with American agriculture?" The answer was, "No American will bend his back to hoe roots." A different condition exists today. Farmers are ready to take up the best business if it will pay. This will lead the way to better live stock. A surprising number of farmers say they are successfully growing beets or mangels for stock feeding. The best pulp from the factory, after the sugar is extracted, retains high feeding value. One of the best hauls of cattle marketed in Chicago last winter was fed at Grand Island, Neb., on corn, oats, barley, oil-mead and best pulp from the factory at that place, costing 75 cents per ton. The feeder had had extensive experience in feeding best pulp in Germany and considers it very profitable, especially where heavy grade rations are fed. Experience at the Iowa station in feeding cattle of high quality for the block shows that best pulp and other roots in the fattening ration produce a more desirable finish.—Country Gentleman.

"Take Them Back At Once."

Mrs. S., a Montreal lady, sent her young son to a store for a packet each of Diamond Dye Fast Black and Diamond Dye Fast Bottle Green to color two all wool skirts that had become faded by sun and wear.

The dealer, who had laid in a stock of dyes composed of soap grease and coloring matter—which he was anxious to sell as the profits were large—handed the youngster two packets which he brought to his mother. Mrs. S., who had had years of experience with the ever reliable Diamond Dyes, told her son to "take them back at once," and if the dealer could not give him the Diamond Dyes, to get his money back and go elsewhere for what she wanted. The Diamond Dyes were procured, and the dyeing operation was a complete success. Had other dyes been used, failure and loss of goods would most likely have been the result. Diamond Dyes are always the brightest, strongest, most durable, and the cheapest.
