THE FAMILY ACCOUNT BOOK.

At this season of the year, when the stores for winter are laid in, the house-keeper is likely to look over her accounts with peculiar interest. For many reasons, it would be better to count what might be called the fiscal or financial year of the household from the first of January. The housekeeper would be ready to meet the expenses of Christmas with a somewhat lighter heart entering on a new year, and would not be so busy as she gaulty is the first of January. In business houses there is a precedent for this. Neither do the States each their financial year the first of January, but addifferent times, according to their own rules.

ferent times, according to their own rules.

An account kept carefully and oxrectly is one of the most powerful aids to economy and orderly expenditures. A nest ledger with the proper lines is the best blankbook. It need not be over six or seven inches by four in sise, and will not cost over 50 cents. It will take very little time to put down all the expenditures and balance them with the amount in the book each day at night. Many days will pass when the expenditures will be alight. Other days they may be excessive. Whenever the book is begun, keep an account and keep it faithfully, and it will be a satisfaction.

And just a few words about that buttery education supposed to be obtained at an agricultural college. We have a case here at home right to the point. Near me is a creamery, which, according to the last annual report, works up over 6 230,000 pounds of milk in a year. The head butter-maker, who wer rather an uneducated man as far as a schools go, was persuaded that a course of training at an agricultural college would make his services more valuable to the creamery. So he took a course some two years ago at our State college, and came back as a supposed exprit. Now, it happens there is an aimcst equally large expansery about five miles from what we call our creamery, operated in ohief by a man who learned all he knows of butter making on a farm. The products of both these creameries are handled by the same firm in Phitadelphia, and while the college student's butter never brings more than the tother, it sometimes brings arent, and consistently in the college student's butter never brings more than the other, it sometimes brings arent, and consistently in the college student's butter never brings in the tother, it sometimes brings arent, and consistently in the college student's butter making.

It will no doubt be considered in very occasionally two cents, a pound less. So much for a college training at butter-making.

It will no doubt be considered in very bad taste, but one dislikes the thought of turning our cleanly reared farmer, boys among a herd of trained city roughs, such as are to be met with these high institutions of learning. If any proof of the fact had been uged, the recent brutal football convents, eminating from these high educational fountain-heads, has furnished it.—William T. Smedley, Chester County, Penn.
