Rain Poured in New York

New York, Nov. 2.—With tooting horns and the crackle of rattlers, New York City poured out into the streets late today for its time-honored election night celebration—for New York always celebrates the election of the winner and whoever the loser.

But hardly had the streets been filled than they were emptied again—or almost emptied—for the skies opened and the rain descended by far more than the proverbial bucket full.

Crowds who had gathered in front of the bulletins boards broke and ran, swept along by a furious wind that whipped the rain drops under umbrellas with merciless force.

Concedes Harding Election

The few, however, that stood their ground at Park Row, at 9:40 o'clock saw the tower of the World building suddenly illuminated, with red lights—the signal that that newspaper, a staunch supporter of Governor Cox, had conceded the election of his rival.

About the same time, the Sun which has championed the Republican banner and which claimed a landslide for Senator Harding, admitted that Governor Smith had been re-elected.

GAMBLING CRAZE HAS HIT ENGLAND HARD

Women the Special Victims of This Vice—Playing the Ponies Gets Them All.

London, Nov. 2.—Out of a total population of the United Kingdom of 45,000,000 people, one-fifth bet on the principal race track events, according to recent bookmakers' calculations. The enormous public to a total of 9,000,000 is said to be mainly due to an unprecedented craze on the part of women for backing horses. Society women have always been notorious race track gamblers, but lately the vice has spread to nearly all women's clubs, nearly all women secretaries, stenographers and clerks risk $5 bets on big races, and even scrub women have caught the mania.

At the last Carewitch it was computed that $45,000,000 went into the hands of bookmakers as stakes, most of it made up of small sums varying from $1 to $5. The biggest winner was reported to be "Jimmy" White, the self-made Lancashire millionaire, whose profits on his backing of the winner, Bracket, are put at $500,000. The tremendous growth of the betting craze in this country is due in part to the example set by a number of popular public men, such as the Prince of Wales and Earl Beatty. It is a well recognized fact that England's evening newspapers owe 75 per cent. of their circulation to racing news, and most of the morning papers about 50 per cent. A run of luck for any newspaper tipster increases sales by 100,000 in a single week, though it is generally lost when the tipster loses his fare.

How Harding Got News.

During the day he utterly had concerned himself very little with the pending national decision. With Mr. Harding he voted during the morning and then made off for a forty mile automobile ride and a game of golf at the Scioto Club near Columbus.
